FROM ALBANY.

Repeal of the Erie Classification by the Senate.

The House Accords to It a Third Reading.

Hearing of Arguments Against the New-York Charter.

Earnest Debate on the Pro-Rata Freight Bill.

Relief to a Sufferer by the July Riot.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Thursday, March 14, 1872.

The discussion on the Erie Repeal bill, which was the feature of the Senate proceedings yesterday, was transferred to the Assembly today, where the same bill had been made the special order immediately after the Troy charter. The charter occupied an hour or more, after which the Erie bill was opened by the presentation of a communication from the new directors of the Company, which was read by the Clerk, and which asked for the passage of the bill now pending before the Legislature, without reference to the change that had occurred in the management of the Erie Railroad. The Clerk then read the first section of the bill, and Mr. HUSTED opened the discussion by moving a slight amendment to make the section conform to the bill ordered to a third reading yesterday in the Senate. He said that he was the only member of the present Assembly who voted against the Classification act when it passed the Legislature in 1869, that he denounced it then, and had continued to denounce it ever since, and had availed himself of every opportunity to procure its repeal. He had introduced a bill to repeal it this session, the motive and object of which had been impugned at the time, but which sought ultimately to attain the same end as the bill now before the House. He heartily supported the present bill, and gave notice that he should move amendments to it as the reading progressed, which should make it conform word for word with the Senate bill.

D. B. HILL, of Elmira, then took the floor, and made a lengthy argument in opposition to the bill, and in favor of the present (or late) management of the Erie Railroad. He was far more temperate and reasonable in his remarks than Mr. MADDEN, who figured as the champion of the Erie Ring in the Senate yesterday, but he advanced no new argument, and it was evident that the only object of his speech was to keep himself in favor with the voters on the line of the Erie Road, who have been sending up their bugbear remonstrances against allowing the concern to go into the hands of a "British monopoly." The drift of his talk was that the road had been managed to suit the people living on its line; that they had not asked for this law; that it was a thing that concerned them more than anybody else, and as long as they were satisfied the people in other sections of the State had no business to interfere.

Mr. HUSTED replied to this argument by saying that he had no doubt that the men who had been in the habit of procuring all the money they wanted from the savings banks in New-York on worthless securities, were perfectly satisfied with the management of these banks; but how was it with the depositors, when they found their money all gone, and the doors of the banks closed?

Mr. NILES and Mr. ALBERGER next addressed the House in support of the bill, and were followed by Speaker SMITH, who gave a brief review of the management of the Erie Corporation under the reign of GOULD and FISK, their secret and illegal issue of stock, and the misappropriation of the moneys accruing therefrom, &c., &c. He then took up the moral aspects of the question, and spoke of the widespread corruption and demoralization that had ensued from this Erie Ring, and the baleful effects upon the morals of the community of the example set by its unprincipled and licentious leaders. It had brought a stigma upon the Commonwealth that every member of this Assembly, representing its honor and its interests, ought to be anxious to wipe out. It had even dragged the judicial ermine through its slough of corruption, and brought two of the Judges of the highest Court of the State, to answer charges of malfeasance, which, in the opinion of a large part of the community, should result in their impeachment. He would not do such injustice to the people living in the southern tier of counties as to believe that if they thoroughly understood this question they would send petitions here asking for the continuance in power of this infamous Ring.

At the close of Speaker SMITH'S remarks, the House took a recess till evening. By general consent, the discussion on the merits of the whole bill was allowed to proceed on the motion to amend the first section. Mr. ALVORD, who occupied the chair, ruled the discussion out of order, if any one objected, but no objection was made, and the discussion will probably be concluded at the evening session, before proceeding any further with the reading of the bill. The design is to amend the bill, so as to make it a verbatim copy of the Senate bill, and in that shape it will be ordered to a third reading by a large majority.

THE POLICE COURT BILL.

Police Justices HOGAN and SHANDLEY are here with their counsel, CHAS. S. SPENCER, to oppose the bill for reorganizing the Police Courts of New York City. A hearing was had before the Judiciary Committee this afternoon, when Mr. SPENCER undertook to show by a recent decision of the Court of Appeals that the bill was unconstitutional, and that the present Justices could not be legislated out of office before the expiration of their terms of office.

RELIEF FOR A SOLDIER'S WIDOW.

The bill appropriating $5,000 to Mrs. WYATT, the widow of a member of the Ninth Regiment N. G., who was killed in the July riots last Summer, has passed the Assembly. It was the first Appropriation bill that passed the House this session.

THE PRO-RATA RAILROAD ACT.

The Senate had another protracted and somewhat heated debate, this morning, on another bill affecting a great railroad corporation—the Pro-rata Freight bill being the special order. The bill is no stranger to the Legislature, having been here in one form or another for a good many years. Its promoters are people living along the line of the Central Railroad, who have a long-standing complaint against that corporation, growing out of the fact that it discriminates unfairly against them in the matter of freight, charging them absolutely higher rates for carrying freight a few miles between points on the line of the road than it charges on freight carried its entire length. Mr. VANDERBILT and a large company of the officers and directors of the Central were in attendance in the Senate Chamber, anxiously watching the progress of the debate. The bill is a very short one. Its material section provides that "no railroad company doing business in this State shall, after the passage of this act, charge, receive, or collect any greater sum for transporting freight over a portion of their road than they charge for carrying the same class of freight over the entire line of their road." It has had a curious history at this session. It was introduced early in February. The Railroad Committee heard one argument in favor of it, and then reported against it. The report was disagreed to after a sharp skirmish in the Senate and the bill ordered to the Committee of the Whole, and today it has to come up as a special order.

Senator TIEMANN moved to recommit the bill to the Railroad Committee, as parties wished to be heard upon it. Mr. JOHNSON strenuously opposed this reference. He denounced it as an insidious attempt to kill the bill, spoke of the great power of railroad corporations in the Legislature, and said that if this bill was killed the present Legislature would lose all its prestige as a reform body. Mr. MADDEN, ever foremost in acting as champion of the railroad interests, asked that the reference might be made. He took occasion to repeat a portion of the speech which he made so many times yesterday, denouncing the Erie repeal as a "bill of abominations," and considered this one very much such another. Senator LOWERY urged immediate action. He said the Central, by its discrimination on way freights, was destroying the business interests of Central New-York. He stated, on his own knowledge, that his neighbors in Utica had been obliged to send goods destined for Chicago first to New-York, and from there to Chicago, and had saved money by it.

Mr. WOODIN made a good point on Mr. MADDEN. He obliged him to confess that the parties asking a rehearing were those opposing the bill, and exposed the absurdity of sending it back to a committee which had already decided it adversely, to enable them to hear more argument against it.

Mr. MURPHY made an ingenious speech in favor of recommitting, and the Senate decided to take that course, first amending the resolution so as to require the committee to report one week from today, a limitation which was exceedingly unpalatable to Mr. MADDEN and the majority of the committee.

ERIE IN THE SENATE.

An attempt was made today to put the Erie bill on its third reading, but Mr. MADDEN sprung to his feet and expressed an intention to talk till midnight rather than allow this to be done. The Senate having had a terrible experience of the gentleman's oratorical powers yesterday, shrank from the fearful threat, and concluded to let the bill take its regular course. It will probably be put on its third reading tomorrow.

METROPOLITAN POLICE BILL.

Senator TIEMANN introduced today a bill to re-establish the old system of Metropolitan Police. He does not, however, desire to be committed in favor of reviving that defunct system.

NEW-YORK CITY BILLS REPORTED.

Pursuant to Controller GREEN'S memorial, the Committee on Cities in the Senate reported the bill to raise money for City and County purposes on the principles of the Two per Cent. Tax Levy of 1871. The percentage authorized to be levied is increased from two per cent. to two and three-quarters per cent. of the assessed value of the real and personal property of the City. Also Mr. BENEDICT'S bill to open Desbrosses-street.

Repeal of the Erie Classification in the Senate.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., March 14.—The discussion on the Erie Repeal bill was resumed in the Assembly this evening, and continued till past midnight.

Messrs. VEDDER of Cattaraugus and SMYTH of Tioga, opposed the bill, and Messrs. PRESTON of Chautauqua, FORT of Oswego, BROWN of Cayuga, and TILDEN of New-York, advocated it. Mr. PRESTON, who lives at the terminus of the Erie Road, said he had been threatened with political death if he voted for this bill, but he had no political aspirations whatever. He did not desire to be returned to the Assembly, but as long as he represented his district here he should vote for justice and right, regardless of threats from any and every quarter. He said that the remonstrances against the bill that had been sent here from his district were mainly gotten up by the employes of the Erie Railroad, and many men, to his knowledge, had been induced to sign them who, after learning all the facts, were anxious that their names should be erased from the remonstrance. At the conclusion of the discussion on the general merits of the bill, the remaining sections were read through and amended so as to correspond with the Senate bill, when it was ordered to a third reading by an overwhelming vote. The Assembly then adjourned.

In the Senate, the Erie bill was brought up for a third reading, and after several motions by Mr. MADDEN to refer it back to the Committee, with instructions to insert this or that amendment, it was read a third time and passed by a vote of 26 to 2, MADDEN and HARROWER alone voting in the negative. One amendment, however, was adopted, which prohibits a director in the Atlantic and Great Western Road from being also a director in the Erie. The same amendment was offered in the Assembly but voted down. In every other respect the bills are alike. A Committee of Conference will be necessary to harmonize the discrepancy before the bill is sent to the Governor.

ARGUMENT AGAINST THE NEW CHARTER.

The Senate Committee on Cities granted another and a final hearing, this afternoon, to the opponents of the Seventy's charter. The speakers were CHARLES P. SHAW and Judge EDMONDS, of New-York. Mr. SHAW'S argument is represented as a very powerful one, and appears to have had more influence on the Committee than all that has been said heretofore against the charter. He took the ground that the powers conferred by a charter for New-York should be restricted to those functions appertaining solely to the Municipal Government, and should not embrace, as they had heretofore done, such extensive jurisdiction and authority as would enable the City to control the State. The Police, the Board of Health, the Fire Department and Docks, he claimed had no business in the charter of the Committee of Seventy, or any other charter for New-York, but should be provided for by State Commissions. Judge EDMONDS spoke against the accumulative voting principle of the charter, and argued that it was unconstitutional. It is now stated that the charter will undergo some radical amendments before it is reported from the Committee. The feeling in favor of a Metropolitan Police has gained ground rapidly, and it is said that the charter will not pass till the fate of the Metropolitan Police bill, introduced yesterday by Mr. TIEMANN, is decided. Nearly all the Senators representing the proposed Metropolitan District are in favor of the bill, and it is asserted that it will receive the support of a majority of the whole Senate.

Legislative Proceedings.

SENATE....ALBANY, Thursday, March 14.

The Chamber of Commerce sent in a petition in favor of the repeal of the Usury laws, stating that the use of money would be cheaper if there were no restrictions. Mr. ROBERTSON moved to lay aside the special order—the Pro Rata Railroad Freight bill—and all other orders down to the third reading of bills, in order that the bill repealing the Classification act might be read. Messrs. MADDEN and JOHNSON objected, and, under their assertion that they would avail themselves of the rule, the motion was withdrawn, and the Senate resumed the consideration of the special order.

RAILROAD WAY FREIGHT BILL.

Mr. JOHNSON made a lengthy speech in favor of the principle of the Pro Rata bill.

After Mr. JOHNSON had concluded, it was moved by Mr. MADDEN that the bill be recommitted to the Railroad Committee.

Mr. WOODIN opposed the motion and the bill at length.

Mr. MURPHY sustained the motion, and was against the bill.

Mr. CHATFIELD also opposed progressing or recommitting, and went for the bill.

Mr. LORD said he was for the bill because his constituents demanded it, but he was for recommitting.

Mr. TIEMANN was for the bill, but for recommitting, in order that the Committee on Railroads might put themselves right on the record.

The motion to report progress prevailed—14 to 11.

D. P. WOOD moved to disagree with the report of the Committee and send the bill to a third reading.

Mr. PALMER moved to recommit to the Railroad Committee.

Mr. WOODIN moved to instruct the Railroad Committee to report in one week. Carried—yeas 17, nays 10.

As amended, the motion to recommit was carried—yeas 18, nays 10. So the matter is postponed for one week.

BILLS REPORTED.

To authorize the Pacific Mail Steam-ship Company to reduce its capital stock. Recess to 7½ P. M.

EVENING SESSION.

In the Senate, this evening, the following bills were considered in Committee of the Whole, and were ordered to a third reading: The Erie Classification Repealing act was, on motion, read and passed, after rejecting several motions to amend, made by Mr. MADDEN. The vote stood 26 yeas to 2 nays, namely, Mr. HARROWER and Mr. MADDEN. The bill was amended by prohibiting any director of the Atlantic and Great Western Railroad Company from being eligible as a director of the Erie Railroad Company.

The Senate then adjourned.

ASSEMBLY.

WILLIAM L. FORD, elected to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Hon. WILLIAM M. ELY, from Broome County, appeared, was sworn in as a member of the Assembly, and took his seat.

JUDICIAL INVESTIGATION.

Mr. FOLEY asked consent to offer a resolution requiring Judges DOWLING and SHANDLEY to render the names of all persons against whom charges have been made, the nature of the charges, who have been tried and convicted in the Court of Special Sessions since June 1, 1870, the sentence of imprisonment passed on each and whether the sentence was enforced, and if not, the reasons; also, whether complainants appeared on trial in each case, and if not, if the complainant had been duly notified of the time and place of the trial, and the manner of the notification, the names of persons where cases have been sent to the Special Sessions for trial, and the names of the persons whose cases have not been brought to trial, and the date when such case was so sent, and the reasons why such cases have not been tried; the names of the persons who have been punished by fine in said Court, and the names of those from whom fines shall have been collected, the date when the fine was imposed or collected, to whom and upon what dates such fines have been paid over by said Judges, and in case such fines have not been paid over, to furnish a statement of what disposition they have made of such fines collected. Mr. FIELDS objected to the introduction of the resolution, and it went over.

TROY CHARTER BILL.

As the special order, the House went into Committee on the Troy Charter bill. The bill was finally ordered to a third reading.

ERIE CLASSIFICATION REPEALING ACT.

The Chair announced the next special order, which was the Erie Classification Repealing act. Mr. ALVORD presented a communication from the officers of the Erie Railroad Company, transmitting the resolution adopted March 12, as follows:

Resolved, That public notice be given that it is the intention of this Board that bona fide stockholders of this Company shall at all times, hereafter have and be allowed to exercise their full and absolute right to control the direction of this Company, and that this Board will do all in its power to bring about such a speedy election as shall secure this result; and in view of this determination, it is further resolved, that this Board does heartily approve of the principles embodied in the act recently reported to the Senate and Assembly of this State for the repeal of the so-called Classification act and for other purposes; and that Messrs. PORTER and MACFARLAND, two of the counsel for this Board, be requested to proceed to Albany to urge the passage of the act in question.

Attest. H. N. OTIS, Secretary.

Both the majority and the minority bills were then taken up.

Mr. HUSTED moved to strike out of section one the words "Their terms of office," which referred to the old directors, and leave the bill to apply to present and future directors.

After some debate, the Committee then rose and reported progress, and the bill was made the special order for 7½ P. M.

The House then took a recess until that time.

EVENING SESSION.

The House, in Committee, resumed the consideration of the Erie Classification Repealing bill.

Mr. VEDDER addressed the Committee at some length. He defended the people of the southern tier of counties who had remonstrated so largely against any interference with the management of this road. They were not only in earnest in these remonstrances, but they were honest. They believed they knew the road had been managed to their best interests, and it was their duty to take the position they had against changing its management. If FISK and GOULD had perpetrated any fraud, they (the people) should not be punished for it. They knew nothing of illegal action on the part of JAY GOULD. Let this subject be considered by the Courts.

Mr. PRESTON said he presented many remonstrances, but he knew the signatures had been obtained by misrepresentation and through misapprehension, and therefore he intended to act upon his judgment in this matter. He was threatened with political ostracism for his action, but he cared not for such threats.

Mr. FORT spoke in reply to Messrs. VEDDER and D. B. HILL, and argued against the principle of classification as applied to railroads. It was the same as to do in a Methodist church, or in the organization of our Board of State officers, but not for a Board of railroad directors. It was true the English stockholders knew of this classification when they bought their stock, but they did not know it was to be used to rob them. He then detailed the operations of the directors known as the transfer swindle.

The debate was continued by Messrs. SMITH and VEDDER in opposition to the bill, and Messrs. LEWIS, BROWN and TILDEN in its favor.

The question was taken on Mr. D. B. HILL'S motion to strike out the first section, and it was lost.

Mr. HUSTED moved to substitute Governor and Controller for Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals, who is to act with the Attorney-General, having reference to officials who shall appoint inspectors of elections.

Mr. GOSS moved further to substitute Secretary of State for Attorney-General.

Mr. JUDD opposed this latter amendment, and it was lost.

Mr. HUSTED'S amendment was adopted.

Mr. HUSTED moved further to amend, providing for filling vacancies in the Board of Inspectors of Elections, which was adopted. Also to prohibit an injunction being granted to prevent a person from voting on the day of election. Adopted. Also that when such injunction is issued it shall be upon eight days' notice. Adopted.

Mr. HUSTED moved to amend, requiring the directors to be citizens and residents of the United States.

Mr. HUSTED'S amendment was adopted.

Mr. FORT moved to strike out the ninth section, relating to the transfer-books being open to inspection, which was carried.

Mr. SMITH moved to add a section requiring the rates of fare for passengers and freight to be the same as in 1871.

Mr. SMITH called attention to the fact that the Erie Railroad, unlike other roads, had no restriction by law on its rates of fare and freight. He asked this amendment for the protection of the people from a grasping monopoly.

Mr. HUSTED said he was afraid this amendment would make the bill unconstitutional, as embracing two different subjects.

Mr. SMITH'S motion was lost.

The bill was then ordered to a third reading, and the House adjourned.

RHODE ISLAND.

Nomination of Republican State Officers—Resolutions Passed Favoring the Re-Election of Gen. Grant.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 14.—The Republican State Convention met at 11 o'clock this morning, at the State House, in this city. The Convention was full and enthusiastic. Gen. AMBROSE E. BURNSIDE was elected temporary President, and J. M. ADDEMAN and IRA O. SEAMANS Secretaries. After the roll of the Convention was completed, Gen. BURNSIDE, the temporary President, and temporary Secretaries were made permanent officers of the Convention. A resolution was passed, congratulating the Republicans of New-Hampshire on their victory. The Convention then took a recess until 2½ o'clock.

On reassembling at 2½ P. M., the following resolutions were passed unanimously:

Resolved, That the National Union Republican Party of Rhode Island adheres to and reaffirms the principles so pronounced at the various national conventions thereof, and illustrated by the glorious and patriotic records of the administrations of Presidents LINCOLN and GRANT.

Resolved, That we highly appreciate the distinguished services of the eminent soldier, the upright and practical civilian, who is now the Chief Magistrate of this great Republic, and we favor his renomination and re-election to the office of President of the United States.

Resolved, That in SCHUYLER COLFAX we recognize an experienced statesman, a fit presiding officer of the Senate of the United States and an upright and intelligent magistrate, and that we cordially favor his renomination and re-election to the office of Vice-President of the United States.

Resolved, That we especially commend the efforts of President GRANT to secure integrity and economy in the administration of the Government, to reduce the burdens of taxation imposed upon the industries of the country by the late war, and to honorably discharge the debt which was incurred in the salvation of the nation.

An informal ballot for Governor gave SETH PADELFORD 43, JONATHAN BRAYTON 31, scattering 34. On the first formal ballot SETH PADELFORD, the present incumbent, was nominated, and the nomination was made unanimous. PARDON W. STEVENS, the present incumbent, was renominated for Lieutenant-Governor.

JOSHUA M. ADDERMAN was nominate for Secretary of State; WILLARD SAYLES was renominated for Attorney-General; SAMUEL CLARK was renominated for General Treasurer. The following were elected delegates to the National Republican Convention at Philadelphia: Gen. Ambrose E. Burnside, Henry H. Fay, Hon. Nathan F. Dixon, Alanzon Steers, Edward L. Freeman, Nelson W. Aldrich, William D. Brayton and Latimer W. Ballou.

The delegates were empowered to fill vacancies. The State Central Committee was appointed and authorized to fill vacancies in the list at its right. The Convention adjourned sine die.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Tariff Bill in the Senate—The Executive, Legislative and Judicial Appropriation Bills Passed—The St. Croix Land Grant in the House—The Japanese and the International Exposition.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—A good deal of time was spent in the Senate today in a sharp struggle between conflicting measures which sought to follow the Appropriation bill. Mr. SHERMAN antagonized all the proposed measures, with the Finance Committee's Tariff bill. Mr. TIPTON said nothing, but kept his dozen speeches under his arm ready for any emergency, the red tape being tied with a slip-knot in case haste were needed. The Senate finally decided to next consider the Tariff bill, and it is the unfinished business for to-morrow. It is uncertain whether it can hold its place for final action now, but Mr. SHERMAN will be able to keep it before the Senate until a fair expression of the feeling of that body can be obtained. Mr. SCOTT gave notice that he should try to have tea and coffee put on the free list. Mr. TRUMBULL will bring forward free coal and salt. Mr. TRUMBULL thinks, however, that the Senate has no right to act upon a general Tariff bill, even by way of wholesale amendment to the House bill, before the action of the House on the general subject. Mr. SHERMAN holds very strongly to the opposite opinion, and in this he is supported by the Finance Committee.

THE APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Executive, Legislative and Judicial appropriations finally passed the Senate today, at 3 o'clock. The appropriations properly belonging to the bill were all acted upon several days ago, and the last two or three days has been taken up with amendments in the character of general legislation. The salaries of a large number of offices have been raised, which is a proper and profitable step in civil service reform, though an Appropriation bill is regarded as an inappropriate place to attach the legislation. The large number of amendments made in the Senate will now go before the House for final approval.

THE ST. CROIX LAND GRANT.

The St. Croix land grant, as a special order, occupied the House all the afternoon, and was not finished at adjournment. Gen. KETCHAM reported back the bill, and grouped all the objections to its passage in a forcible argument against the bill. The speeches went over all the old ground, the only new features of the discussion being occasional switches off upon the tariff, every measure which comes up in the House lately being looked at through free trade or protective goggles. Five amendments are pending to the bill, some of which destroy it. If the Bayfield Road does not secure a renewal of these lands, it is very clear that the House will guard them against falling into the hands of the Northern Pacific. Mr. CONGER, of Michigan, made the strongest speech in favor of the bill, his chief argument being that Wisconsin became a State with half the territory within its borders belonging to the Government, and that Congress, in justice, should legislate to put it upon a footing equal with that of the original States in this particular. The bill comes up for final disposal to-morrow. It is impossible to predict what filibustering may do against it, but the chances for a passage seemed favorable at adjournment.

A DESERVED HONOR.

Assistant Medical Purveyor J. H. BAXTER was confirmed by the Senate today to be Chief Medical Purveyor of the United States Army. Dr. BAXTER is the son of the late PORTUS BAXTER, who was member of Congress from Vermont during the war, and for three consecutive terms, from the district now represented by WORTHINGTON C. SMITH. He was the only volunteer attached to the medical service that has ever received a position in the regular service higher than Assistant Surgeon, which makes his present promotion a distinguished honor.

Dispatches to the Associated Press.

THE JAPANESE AND THE CENTENNIAL EXPOSITION.

This evening, by appointment, Gen. DAVID ATWOOD, Chairman, together with Messrs. Cleveland, Byrd, Prosser, Doxter, Spink and Claggett, the Committee appointed by the Centennial Exposition, called upon the Japanese Embassy, at the Arlington House, when Gen. ATWOOD delivered an address, explaining the character and purposes of the international exhibition which it is proposed to hold in Philadelphia on the hundredth anniversary of our national independence, and expressing the hope that they will use their personal and official influence to induce a full representation of the Imperial Government of Japan in this exposition in the year 1876. IWAKURA received the copy of the resolutions, and responded in Japanese, of which the following is a translation:

MR. CHAIRMAN AND GENTLEMEN OF THE COMMITTEE: On behalf of the Embassy and our Emperor and people we thank you for the kind invitation extended to our country to assist in the International Exposition to be held in Philadelphia in the year 1876. It will afford us great pleasure to recommend to His Majesty, our Emperor, such steps as may be necessary to unite with you in celebrating the 100th anniversary of the existence of the Government of the United States, as indicated above.

AMERICAN REGISTERS FOR FOREIGN-BUILT VESSELS.

The Secretary of the Treasury has prepared a bill to give American citizens to foreign-built vessels owned by citizens of the United States, under certain restrictions. This bill has been submitted to the Secretary of State, and meets his approval. It has also been forwarded to the Committee on Commerce of the House of Representatives. This bill provides that any vessel of foreign build, of not less than five tons burden, wholly owned by a citizen or by citizens of the United States, or by a company incorporated or organized under the laws thereof, or any State or territory, or by both such citizen or citizens and such company, and commanded by a citizen of the United States, may be registered in the manner and subject to the conditions and limitations set forth in the following sections, which are: Proof of ownership to be made by oath or affirmation, in the form of a declaration, setting forth the names, nationality or citizenship, and residence of the respective owners, and the corporate style and title of any company owning or interested in such vessel, with date of organization, title, and date of the act under which organized, and place where effected, and place of business of such company, the declaration to be signed by the owner or owners of at least three-fifths in interest in such vessel, or by the President, Secretary and Treasurer of such company, or both. The declaration must also set forth the name by which such vessel was previously owned, together with her build, rig and tonnage, and such other particulars as may be proper for her identification. The owners must also produce a bill of sale or some instrument of that nature, showing wherein and whereby the entire ownership and proprietary interest in and of such vessel is duly, lawfully and effectively transferred, conveyed to and vested in the owner or owners described in the declaration. The declaration may be made before any Collector of Customs, or Surveyor acting as such, Consul or Vice-Consul of the United States, or before the Clerk of any Court of Record in the United States, or before any Notary Public of a State or Secretary, provided it is certified by the seal of the Court or of such Notary as the case may be; and further provided that, when it is made by or in behalf of any company organized as aforesaid, the truth of the same may be certified by the President under the seal, and attested by the Secretary; but if the company has no seal, oath or affirmation is necessary as in other cases. The bill of sale must be legally executed, and may be considered so when signed and acknowledged by the respective vendors before, and certified to by a Collector of Customs or Surveyor acting as such, or Consul, or Vice-Consul of the United States. The form and method of the registration is to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury. The certificate is to be known as the register of a foreign-built vessel, and only to remain in force as long as the ownership shall remain as set forth therein, but in case of change of ownership not involving an exchange of nationality or identity, such register may be renewed under proper regulations. Every vessel registered under this act is declared a vessel of the United States, and entitled to the privileges lawfully enjoyed by vessels registered under the existing laws, except that of importing or exporting goods to or from any port of the United States; or transporting the same from one port to another port of the United States; or of engaging in any fisheries in the waters of the United States; and such vessels are declared to be subject to the same requirements, and entitled to the same privileges, in foreign countries, and before Consuls and Consular officers of the United States, as other registered vessels of the United States.

A YOUTHFUL SUICIDE.

A Boy of Seventeen Kills Himself in a Moment of Childish Anger.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PORT JERVIS, N. Y., Thursday, March 14, 1872.

A shocking tragedy was committed in this place about 8 o'clock this morning—a lad, about seventeen years of age, deliberately shooting himself through the heart in the presence of his little brother and sister while in a fit of anger at his parents. His name was ALBERT MORSE, and he lived with his father and mother at No. 17 Ball-street, where the terrible act was committed. The deceased was a high-tempered, headstrong boy. A few weeks ago he tripped, fell down-stairs, injuring himself quite seriously; but, despite the doctor's injunction that he must keep quiet, persisted in taking long walks. This morning his father determined to keep him at home, and hid his boots before he was up. ALBERT became very angry when he found he could not go out, and began manifesting his violent temper in various ways. Previous to the shooting, he went up-stairs to the SITTING-ROOM, where his sister and brother were playing, and commenced to torment them, until their cries brought their mother up-stairs. ALBERT not ceasing at her commands, she went down-stairs, and breaking a small switch off a tree, returned to the room and whipped him. She left ALBERT sulking in one corner, and went down-stairs. Just then KILGOUR, a man who boarded in the house, passed through the room, on his way to breakfast. As he went out of the door, he saw ALBERT get up and go toward a bureau that stood in the room, and as he reached the dining-room, JENNIE, the sister, came running down-stairs shouting: "Mother, ALBERT is going to shoot himself!" The report of a pistol was heard immediately afterward, and KILGOUR rushed up-stairs, followed by Mr. MORSE, and on entering the room found their worst fears realized. ALBERT had taken his father's revolver from the bureau drawer and shot himself through the heart. A sofa stood near the bureau, and after he had shot himself, the boy had turned partially around, and was hanging on the arm of the sofa. KILGOUR caught him in his arms, and placed him upon the sofa, and Dr. HUNT was summoned. He pronounced him beyond all aid. He lived but a few minutes. The little brother says that ALBERT went to the bureau, and taking the revolver out said, "I'll put an end to this, anyhow," whereupon his sister started to call his mother while he ran toward ALBERT to try and get the pistol away from him, but it was discharged before he reached him. The scene at the house after the occurrence was sad indeed. The mother was half crazed and her lamentations were heartrending. A short time before her oldest son, CHARLES, had been brought home a mangled corpse from the railroad, on which he was employed, and this tragic ending of another of her children, was another terrible blow.

In the absence of Coroner MILLER, DANIEL HOLBROOK, Esq., Justice of the Peace, summoned a jury, and held an inquest, the verdict being brought in accordance with the above facts.

NEW-JERSEY LEGISLATURE.

Drainage of the Newark Meadows—The Signal Service—Minority Representation—The Congressional Reapportionment—Jersey City Measures.

From Our Own Correspondent.

TRENTON, Thursday, March 14, 1872.

In the Senate today, the Committee on Agriculture reported adversely on the bill to repeal the act creating the Driggs Drainage Company. This is the Company which is engaged in draining the meadows between Newark and Elizabeth, and the Committee object to the repeal on the ground that it would be an unwarranted excuse of the power of repeals even if constitutional. The Senate ordered to a third reading a supplement to the Usury law, restoring the old penalties of a forfeiture of principal and interest.

A joint resolution was introduced in the Senate today, asking Congress to place floating observatories along our coast for the purpose of extending the operations and benefits of the Signal Service. A bill to prevent injustice in the elections of private corporations, introduced today, provides, in order to secure "minority representation" in all elections of directors of such corporations, that on the demand of one-fifth of the total amount of stock, every share shall be entitled to as many votes as there may be directors or officers to be voted for, the shareholder may cast all such votes for one or for several persons, as he may elect, the persons receiving the highest number of votes to be elected.

The Senate today ordered to a third reading the bill reapportioning the Congressional Districts. The bill, in accordance with the decision of a Republican caucus, was amended by placing Mercer in the Second District instead of the Third, and Monmouth in the Third instead of the Second. Under this arrangement, the Second District is made certainly Republican, and the Third as positively Democratic. Four districts of the seven will now be permanently Republican instead of three, as under the original plan; but this will be the utmost we can secure, whereas under that plan we had, with three certain districts, a chance for two others, five in all.

Several measures of interest to Jersey City were disposed of in the House today. Among them was one to establish a Board of School Commissioners in that city, in place of the present Board appointed by the Mayor. The bill was opposed on the ground that legislative interference in municipal affairs was unwarrantable, except in cases where the public interests cannot be otherwise possibly protected. For the same reason, the bill to create a partisan Police in Hoboken was rejected, receiving only 10 votes out of 60. The bill for the appointment of Commissioners of Jurors for Hudson County was also lost.

In the House, today, the Judiciary Committee presented ten local-option bills, with a report that as the Attorney-General had decided the bills to be unconstitutional, the Committee declined to make any recommendation. The report having been concurred in, the bills were ordered to lie on the table, which is equivalent to killing them for the session. A motion to reconsider the vote by which the Narrow-gauge Railway was lost yesterday, failed for the want of two votes. A bill was introduced, appropriating $3,000 for the procuring of copies of valuable papers relating to the early history of New-Jersey, now deposited in the British Museum, State Paper office. A bill was also introduced to fix the salary of the Attorney-General at $3,000. It is now only $1,500. A communication asking a donation of the New-Jersey Law and Chancery Reports to the Chicago Law Institute was referred, in the Senate, to the Library Committee.

Latest Returns from the New-Hampshire Election.

CONCORD, N. H., March 14.—Two hundred and twenty-two towns give STRAW, 38,325; WESTON, 35,822; BLACKMER, 424; COOPER and scattering, 568; STRAW'S majority, 1,511. Twelve towns to be heard from, which, if they voted as last year, reduces STRAW'S majority to about 1,200. Complete returns from the Eleventh Senatorial District elect FLING, Democrat, by 35 majority. The Senate stands, 8 Republicans and 4 Democrats. The list of Representatives is incomplete, but so far as heard from the Republicans have 207; the Democrats, 135; Temperance, 1; Labor Reform, 4. The full list will probably give the Republicans about 50 majority.

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., March 14.—The Chronicle has returns from all but eight towns, which last year threw less than 800 votes. STRAW, 38,568; WESTON and scattering, 37,338; STRAW'S majority, 1,230, which will probably be increased. Rockingham County gives 787 majority for STRAW, a Republican gain of 852. The Republicans, N. of Kittery fired 100 guns in honor of the New-Hampshire election, this evening. A torch-light procession here is proposed for to-night.

Troubles with Indians in Montana.

HELENA, Montana Territory, March 13.—A letter from the Blackfoot Agency, Montana, March 10, says that in a fight in the Piegan Camp, on Teeter Mountain, the Chief of the Piegans and three Indians were killed, and Mountain Chief's son mortally wounded. Seven white men have been killed during the Winter. The cause, in nearly every instance, was the whisky-trade between traders and Indians across the boundary lines.

INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

There is no longer any doubt that the case in favor of an International copyright has broken down before the Joint Committee of Congress on the Library, to which it was referred. For nearly forty years such a measure has been urged upon Congress and the people by many of our most intelligent and eminent citizens, and especially by our leading authors. In all that time, although frequently arguing the question with effect before the people in their writings, they never obtained a fair hearing for their views before Congress, and it was suspected by some of them that the opponents of the measure were bent on avoiding an open argument. Much sympathy was felt for the authors on this ground, and public opinion justly held that the question could never be regarded as finally settled until a careful and thorough examination should be made, by a competent tribunal, open to the testimony and reasonings of all parties concerned. Such an examination has now been made. The Library Committee of the present Congress, as a whole, has rarely been equalled in the ability and culture which adapt it for considering such questions. It has patiently sat, day after day, listening to arguments, reading correspondence, studying facts and statistics gathered from all sources, and thus collecting both the principles involved in the subject and the information necessary to apply them correctly. They have heard all that the advocates of international copyright could suggest, and all that its opponents had to offer against it. In short, their investigation of this subject has unquestionably been the most comprehensive and complete ever made; and it is plain to every man who has watched the progress of the hearing that the argument in favor of the legislation proposed is a failure. As far as the decision of the Committee is to be governed by the case set before them, they cannot fail to report against giving any further attention to the subject.

It is for the friends of a new law to prove that it ought to be passed. The friends of international copyright have seen fit to make their whole case rest on one assumption—that the author has an abstract and absolute right of property in his work, of which no Government or law can deprive him. Apart from existing laws, the sale of a book containing his writings, without his consent, is "piracy" and "robbery;" and, therefore, they claim, it is the binding duty of Congress to recognize and protect this right, which already exists by the law of a higher power. Readers who have followed the course of the discussion in newspapers and magazines, as well as the few who have attended the hearings of the Committee and read the briefs and published letters submitted to them, will easily recall to mind the fact that there has not been an argument in favor of any of the bills before the Committee which has not assumed this moral right of property in authorship as its basis. Incidentally, other ideas have been introduced; the arguments against any legislation have been examined and some attempts made to meet them; but the case of the petitioners for foreign copyright has, on the whole, been so completely interwoven with the assumption in question, that it must stand or fall with it. If foreign authors have no claim, which Congress is bound to protect, to the profits of republishing their books in this country, the argument offered for granting them a copyright disappears.

Their claim of a moral right is, at first thought and to superficial thinkers, a strong one. It takes hold of the people's moral sense. They love justice, and will not tolerate a violation of it in their name. The argument derived from this theory has accordingly made boats of converts to the copyright movement, when urged before people not disposed to criticise it closely. But it was weakness itself to ask practical legislators for action on such grounds. What has Congress to do with abstract or individual standards of right? Let every member be convinced that the theory in question is true. Yet Congress has its standard in the letter and spirit of the Constitution, which defines its powers, and in the welfare of the whole people, which determines its exercise of them. The question before the Committee was two-fold. Is any form of international copyright constitutional? and, if so, is it for the good of the nation to adopt it? The opponents of the measure argued, with much plausibility, that every form of it is unconstitutional; they did very much toward proving that, even if adopted and sustained by the Courts, it would seriously interfere with the progress of intelligence, by making literature costly. Its advocates made but feeble attempts to show that under the Constitution, Congress can pass the measure in any form; and, in answer to the proofs of its inexpediency, they made no headway at all. In view of all this, the Committee have no choice but to dismiss the moral argument as irrelevant. Having to consider a constitutional and practical, not a moral question, they must, of course, disregard the convictions of "right" entertained by the eminent petitioners, and confine themselves to the boundaries of expediency and legality, which are the measure of statesmanship. Yet, dismissing this theory, they leave no case to the advocates of international copyright.

It seems that their opponents have taken no pains at all to their argument of right in authorship. This may be fair in a practical controversy, since, even if the argument had all the truth claimed for it, the Committee could not accept it as pertinent to the issue. Yet we cannot but wish that the question—whether the authors have this abstract and unconditional right of ownership in the books they have published—had been more carefully canvassed. If they have this right—and yet it is unconstitutional and inexpedient, or both, for Congress to protect it—the public conscience is placed in an awkward dilemma. Can it be that it is the duty of the statesman to violate the just convictions of the man? Are the moral obligations of the nation at war with its own intellectual growth, so that one of them must be sacrificed in order to fulfill the other? These questions may have nothing to do with the practical duty of our legislators, but they have, at least, a strong interest to every thoughtful mind. For ourselves, we do not believe in a conflict of duties, in an antagonism between patriotism and law; we refuse to recognize that justice and that honor which are violated by obeying the laws and by promoting the welfare of our country. If it be proved that a copyright given to foreign authors would retard instead of promoting "the progress of science and the useful arts" among the people, we shall hold that there is a flaw in the theory that authors have an inalienable right, after publishing their books, to control the circulation of them at their will.

And, indeed, much may be said against such a theory. It certainly has no foundation in "natural law," because a book is one of the most artificial and complex productions of modern civilization. In a state of nature, that is to say, apart from the contrivances of society, every man's thoughts and words, once uttered, are the property of mankind. The most ancient of poets calls them "winged words," because they take wings, independently of their author, and fly through the earth. The transition from the uttered and memorized song of HOMER to the modern book is through a thousand stages; and the circulation of an author's work now depends upon a host of considerations, of which the merits, or the time, labor and genius it represents, are but the least. The extent of the community speaking his language, their habits and tastes in reading, the invention and perfection of the art of printing, the judgment of publishers in fixing its form, style and price; their enterprise and ability in distributing it; the price of materials and labor, and many other elements enter into it. Whatever right of property the author may have, therefore, cannot rest upon natural law; because its value grows entirely out of the artificial conditions of modern society. We must conclude that natural or abstract right and copyright are not akin; and that the latter is but a rough legal contrivance to secure to authors, as a class, a reasonable reward for their labor. No man claims that the money value of the copyright bears any proportion whatever to the literary or scientific value of the book; that a novel which brings Miss BRADDON thousands of dollars for a few weeks of scribbling is really worth to mankind so much more than HOWDITCH's life-work upon the Méchanique Céleste, as to deserve a hundred times as great a reward. And the same view has been taken practically by every civilized nation; for there is not one, in which copyright exists at all, where it is not a grant of the law, which would cease to exist if the law were repealed. Now property in land, products and wages would remain if the whole statute-book were abolished. These "rights" are protected but not created by law. But the common sense of mankind join with reason in putting copyright into a very different category, as a grant made by law, not because it is a right, but because it is for the good of the whole community to make it. The moral argument for international copyright ought therefore to be as void of influence upon public opinion as it is irrelevant to any question of practical legislation. Yours truly, JUSTICE.

OFFICIAL CORRUPTION ABROAD.

Charges of Embezzlement and Forgery Against a French Prefect.

Rouen (Feb. 26) Correspondence of the London Daily News.

The vast and superb hall of the Assize Court here has been thronged today with the élite of the Department of the Seine Inferieure and Eure, who are either witnesses or excited spectators of the extraordinary trial of M. JANVIER DE LA MOTTE, the late Prefect of the Eure. One hundred and fifty witnesses occupied almost all the seats in the body of the hall, and the President disappointed hundreds of ladies who begged for places. Four Judges and Procureur-General ISOARD and Advocate-General GRENIER sat in their scarlet robes. Every Paris journal was represented. The trial will last many days, therefore an extra Judge and two supplemental juries have been appointed. With M. JANVIER DE LA MOTTE are indicted, as accomplices, M. BOURGUIGNON, the Departmental architect; M. BOULANGER, a builder; and M. VITECOCQ, Mayor of Beaumont. All are respectable-looking men. There has been no trial like this in France for many years.

M. JANVIER DE LA MOTTE, aged forty-eight, is a tall, well-shaped man. He has dark hair, closely shaven cheeks, carefully cultivated, thin long-drawn-out mustache, and short imperial; his face, he has every pretension to be regarded as an Adonis. He has, nevertheless, a manly, intellectual, and an assured, not to say defiant demeanor. He surveyed the Judges and the audience as though conscious of being the principal person in the place, and with an air of command. His movements are not inelegant, and it is remarkable how high he holds his head when he stands up. M. LACHAUD, the counsel for the Emperor's favorite Prefect, on taking his seat, glanced at the gorgeous fretted roof of the mediæval hall, and remarked with a sigh that it would absorb his voice. The prisoners challenged nine jurymen, and the prosecution six. The ultimate panel looked quite a special jury. The impressive oath administered was to the effect that they would neither betray the interests of the prisoners nor those of society, which accuses them. The reading of the indictment occupied three hours.

It began by stating that on Feb. 19, 1856, the prisoner, JANVIER DE LA MOTTE, was translated from the Prefecture of the Lozère to that of the Eure. He had for many years before occupied various public offices, from his conduct in which he had acquired the reputation of an unscrupulous, immoral man, a devotee of facile pleasures, devoid of any sense of duty or dignity. Although his wife had a good fortune, of which he enjoyed the interest, he was always in debt. The instructions which he took before his appointment to Evreux he was in difficulties, and that when at Meude he had recourse to disgraceful means to raise money. His sojourn in the Department of the Eure increased his embarrassments. His debts increased rapidly, less from the cost of his establishment than from other expenses to which his disorderly habits led him to incur. The facilities of railway communication enabled him to pass much of his time in Paris. He continually left his wife and children, to indulge in debauchery with abandoned women, and often employed procureuses to find them for him. His conduct was so bad that in 1861 his wife left it necessary for her own dignity and the interest of her children to apply for a separation, which the Court granted. The winding up of his affairs which followed upon this judgment showed that his debts amounted to 420,039 francs. He had long since ceased to pay his tradesmen, and often borrowed money of his servants. His wife's relations in vain made sacrifices to keep up his credit. Far from amending, he saw in the separation only an opportunity to indulge more openly than ever in his vile passions, and he openly installed his mistresses in his Prefecture, to the great scandal of the honest people of Evreux. With such habits, it was a matter of course that he should contract new debts. He constantly discounted bills with disreputable usurers, and his bills were regularly dishonored. Between Dec. 21, 1865, and March 13, 1868, no less than 140 writs were issued against him for sums of money amounting in the aggregate to 1,095,522 francs. Being in imminent danger of bankruptcy, with a schedule showing 700,000 francs of debt, his friends again came forward and saved him. But shortly afterward, in April, 1868, it was thought necessary to remove him from his Prefecture. Suspicion had long been entertained as to his administration of the departmental funds. So far back as 1865 M. DESCAMPS, the Mayor of Evreux, denounced the Council-General of the Eure, requesting to ask accounts of the Prefect touching the amount of a subscription for the relief of distressed cotton-workers which he received, and also a sum of upward of 15,000 francs paid for entries at the Regional Agricultural Exhibition of 1864. The next year, in 1866, an account was presented to the Council General, and duly passed that body, but suspicions continued to exist. In July, 1870, the Municipal Council of Evreux passed a resolution that the former Prefect should be called upon to account for the exhibition money, which belonged to the town. And at length, on Sept. 20, the Baron de Evreux preferred a charge of forgery and embezzlement, which is the foundation of the present prosecution. It were impossible to investigate all the facts relating to the administration of the prisoner, extending over a period of ten years, during which he turned over as much as forty millions. The instruction has confined itself to a few facts which, when grouped together, show conclusively the criminal habits of JANVIER DE LA MOTTE. It was by practising on the weakness of his subordinates and the tradesmen of the Prefecture, and procuring from them fictitious bills and false attestations, and in giving himself false certificates, that he wilfully eluded the rules of the public accounts, and procured funds which were unduly placed to the debit of the communes and the department. His frauds began ten years ago.

A vast number of instances of frauds were then given, of which I can only cite some few specimens. It is alleged that the real expenses of the celebrated fête to the Emperor in 1858 were but 35,000 francs, whereas the Prefect charged the Department 53,000 francs. CHARLES GODARD, the aeronaut, received 1,200 francs for going up in a balloon, but signed without reading it a receipt for 4,000 francs. As a contractor for embankments on highways, a stone-breaker, who cannot read or write, and never in his life had so much as 100 francs owing him, was made to figure as the recipient of 9,000 francs for a road contract. A flower merchant of Paris named BOUSSAVIT furnished flowers to the amount of 2,490 francs for a fête at the Prefecture. He received 2,590 francs from a girl named HENRIETTE RENAULT, one of JANVIER DE LA MOTTE'S mistresses, living at No. 8 Rue d'Enghien, Paris. For the bribe of 100 francs the true tradesman signed a receipt for 9,500 francs. M. SIMON, the Manager of the Evreux Theatre, received 1,900 francs for an official performance. He was induced to sign a receipt for 4,000 francs, on the representation that the Prefect had made presents of diamonds to M. BRESSANT and Mlle. DAMAIN. These same diamonds had been already charged to the departmental fund. He charged expensive flowers, selected by his mistress, HENRIETTE, to the public purse. He charged 2,399 francs for postages of his circulars, whereas he was entitled to frank letters in his department, and it was utterly impossible that anything like the amount could have been expended. In 1861 the American war produced a cotton crisis. The Ministry sent 112,000 francs to JANVIER DE LA MOTTE to relieve distress. The Council General voted 242,000 francs, and a private subscription amounted to 147,738 francs. Of all these sums, which passed through the hands of the Prefect, only 49,000 francs were accounted for. To sum up, the instruction—which bears only upon a few points of the twelve years' administration of the prisoner, JANVIER DE LA MOTTE—shows that he exercised a most fatal sway in the Department of the Eure. He sowed demoralization broadcast. As a man, he was the example of the most scandalous debauchery. As an administrator, he trampled upon the plainest rules of probity. He forged writings, corrupted his subordinates, scattered public money to the winds, and paid for his own inordinate lusts with funds which should have been sacred. Such is the past life of this man, who endowed with no common intelligence might have honorably served his country, if, in addition to his talent, he had united common honesty and that feeling of self-respect without which a functionary is unworthy of the confidence of the State and the esteem of his fellow-citizens. Encouraged by his example, and misled by his deplorable influence, his accomplices indicted with him lent themselves to the fabrication of false vouchers, if not for their own personal benefit, at least to be agreeable to him. In consequence the prisoners were accused as principals or accomplices of malversation of private and public moneys, forgery of private and public documents, and "forfeiture" and "concussion," two technical expressions in the French code for crimes committed by public functionaries.

M. JANVIER DE LA MOTTE, who has great command of countenance, listened imperturbably to the several charges of the indictment. Among the witnesses for the prosecution are Count Lagrange, the Duke of Albufera, the Marquis Biosseville, the Duke of Clermont Tonnerre, and M. Godard, the aeronaut. M. Janvier de la Motte has cited M. Ponyer-Quertier, M. Pinard, an Imperialist Minister, Count de Vallon, Admiral la Roncière Le Noury, and the Marquis de Croix, with others of less note.

THE ERIE DRAMA.

Various Views About the Gould Surrender—What Mr. Williams Knows About the Master—Proceedings of the Board—Bischoffsheim and Goldschmidt Appointed Financial Agents in Europe.

At the opening of the Stock Exchange, yesterday morning, there was an instant demand for Erie, and the shares went up steadily under a strong call. All sorts of pleasant rumors were afloat among the brokers, the most coherent being that an informal examination of the Erie books had been far more favorable than had been anticipated. It was believed during the entire day that sufficient figures would be published from the financial statement which it was known the Board of Directors is preparing, to justify the hopeful views of sanguine holders of this stock. This had, no doubt, some effect upon the share market, and though nothing appeared, either definite or indefinite, Erie mounted up steadily during the day. In the afternoon Mr. TRAVERS, of the new Directory, made his appearance, and in answer to the inquiries of friends said that he was preparing a statement concerning the consolidated bonds of Erie, which would accompany a formal petition to have them placed on the share list. He is said, also, to have confirmed so much of the rumors current as referred to the books of the Company and to the outstanding liabilities.

Yet, in spite of this activity and this confidence, the brokers and the bankers of Wall, Broad and the vicinity, have not changed their mind with regard to the drama lately performed at the Grand Opera-house. They still insist that it was a farce, and that the new directors are in the interest of the Atlantic and Great Western. Some asserted that the facts were these: BISCHOFFSHEIM & GOLDSCHMIDT, brokers, of London, have in the past made such advances to the Atlantic and Great Western as virtually to own it. This Company, it is alleged, is so nearly in a bankrupt condition as not to be able to earn much more than the interest on its debt, exclusive of the running expenses. By a proposed arrangement with Erie it would be able to gain enough to pay interest and expenses. But by merging the two companies together and putting the profits into a pool, Erie to have sixty per cent, and the Atlantic and Great Western the remaining forty per cent., there would remain a very handsome profit indeed for the latter. There would, however, be an equivalent advantage to Erie in this bargain which would be completely one-sided, and is not called for either by the logic of events or the wishes of the shareholders. So far back as six months ago, BISCHOFFSHEIM opened overtures with JAY GOULD, but FISK was unwilling, and, though JAY GOULD coquetted with the London firm, nothing came of it. FISK prepared for the Albany fight in his usual manner. His delay removed the obstacle to GOULD's consideration of the proposals of the English firm, and the result was the solemn farce performed on Monday and Tuesday.

A reporter of the TIMES yesterday interviewed Mr. AMOS DENISON WILLIAMS, the representative of the American shareholders of Erie, whose offices are at No. 40 Wall-street. He stated that he was not altogether dissatisfied with the turn things had taken, because, though the inclination toward the Atlantic and Great Western Company was too visible to be overlooked, yet there were two gentlemen in the Board of Directors who were far too honorable to permit any action that was advantageous to them at Erie. These too were Gen. DIX and Col. STEBBINS. He had known the latter for very many years, and was satisfied that the interests of the Company would never suffer while he had anything to say in the matter. But for the other new members of the Erie Board he was constrained to believe that the Atlantic and Great Western was more in their mind than Erie. He did not think that the statements in the injunction procured by Mr. JAY GOULD concerning the buying of five directors by BISCHOFFSHEIM for $250,000, were to be considered as falsehoods. All the brokers that he was acquainted with were of the same opinion as himself that BISCHOFFSHEIM had bought all of the Erie Board that was either purchaseable or worth buying, including Mr. JAY GOULD, and that the whole siege arrangement was planned from beginning to end, in all its details, including the demonstrations by the TOMMY LYNCH gang, and the chase through the President's rooms. This view would seem to be entertained in England also, for the bonds of the Atlantic and Great Western went up yesterday seven per cent.

REPORTER—Then you do not believe that SICKLES and the reformers played points upon ARCHER and the cure?

MR. WILLIAMS—No, I do not. What points had they to play? Men talk about their having been threatened with suits, and say ARCHER especially was frightened into yielding because SICKLES declared that claims to the amount of twenty-two millions could be made against him by the Erie Railway, and would be if he held out. But if these claims are illegitimate, the men are bound to enforce them, and if they are not legitimate it is not likely that they would have scared Mr. ARCHER.

REPORTER—What points did they bring upon JAY GOULD?

MR. WILLIAMS—I do not know, nor does anybody. The vulnerable point of all these old directors is in the contracts which were made with them for furnishing supplies to Erie. ELDRIDGE, of Elmira, for example, has a rolling-mill in which JAY GOULD has a quarter interest. He furnished all the iron and steel that was required. His friends claim that he did it at the most reasonable prices, but a little publicity would soon determine that. It was through these contracts that all the earnings of the road were absorbed. If the present men mean business, they will stop these contracts at the earliest possible opportunity, and make them public at once. I am persuaded that they will read like a chapter out of the TIMES' exposé of the new Court-house.

REPORTER—Can you tell me what amount of stock is held by the new men?

MR. WILLIAMS—I cannot. It is claimed that GOULD holds twelve millions, and that the Atlantic and Great Western men have six more. Now HEATH and RAPHAEL represent two-thirds of all the stock held in Europe, possibly about forty millions. I represent the American stockholders at large, and between us we shall certainly defeat the election of GOULD.

REPORTER—Can you tell me what directors you propose to nominate for that election.

MR. WILLIAMS—I must be excused from saying so much. But this I can say, that all the talk got up by ELDRIDGE in the small country papers about Englishmen running the Erie is buncombe. Mr. SWAN, the agent for HEATH and RAPHAEL, does not contemplate any such thing, and never did. As Erie stands today, it is controlled by BISCHOFFSHEIM, who is decidedly an Englishman, and there will be, sooner or later, an attempt to involve it in contracts favorable to his interests and most disadvantageous to Erie. For when a man planks down $250,000, it is to get something in return. Nobody doubts that. Time will show what that way Mr. BISCHOFFSHEIM proposes to get back value received for such lavish expenditure. It is my hope and full belief, however, that any attempt to merge the two Companies, or to make a contract between them to the great advantage of the Atlantic and Great Western, will be at once met by Mr. STEBBINS, who is an excellent man of business and very favorable. DIX is honorable too, but he is only a figure-head.

REPORTER—To what do you attribute the sudden rise in Erie this morning?

MR. WILLIAMS—To reports that a financial statement was about to be submitted very favorable to the Company.

REPORTER—Was one furnished?

MR. WILLIAMS—No; it was only rumor. But on the Stock Exchange rumors are like dust which penetrates into dwelling-houses no matter how carefully they are fastened up.

REPORTER—How was it that you who are interested in Erie for the American shareholders did not foresee the coup d'état of BISCHOFFSHEIM?

MR. WILLIAMS—I did, or rather we did. As early as January we were fully posted in his intentions, and the Committee of which I am one sent round the following circular to the stockholders:

NEW-YORK, Jan. 4, 1872.

At a meeting of the Committee of "American Stockholders of the Erie Railway," held on Wednesday, the 3d inst., the recent movement set on foot by Messrs. BISCHOFFSHEIM and GOLDSCHMIDT in the interest of the Atlantic and Great Western stockholders was discussed, and the following resolution was passed:

Whereas, The Committee of American Stockholders in the Erie railway have given earnest attention directed to the recent combination on the part of the stockholders in the Atlantic and Great Western Railway Company, represented by Messrs. BISCHOFFSHEIM and MCHENRY, of London, and have reason to believe that any management of the Erie Railway in the interest of the Atlantic and Great Western Road, or any compromise with the present managers of the Erie Railway, would be seriously detrimental to the prosperity of the main line.

Resolved, That the Committee recommend the American stockholders to withhold their confidence from the above-named Atlantic and Great Western combination, and from all movements having for their object the benefit of outside railways, or the maintenance in office of any part of the present management of the Erie Railway, or any movement whatsoever proposing to effect objects outside or incompatible with the direct interests of the Erie Railway. (Signed,) W. B. CLERKE,
REUBEN MANLEY,
AMOS D. WILLIAMS.

So you see we were not taken by surprise. To put the matter in a nutshell for the readers of the TIMES, we await the election in July next, calmly confiding in the honor of DIX and STEBBINS. We rely on them to be what they say they are, merely trustees of the stockholders. As such they will prevent any contract being made between the Company and the Atlantic and Great Western. If others attempt this, as they most indubitably will, we rely on them to stop them, even if they have to get an injunction.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE ERIE BOARD.

The directors met at noon yesterday, a quorum being present. The Vice-President, Mr. ARCHER, was in the chair. Messrs. BISCHOFFSHEIM and GOLDSCHMIDT, of London, were appointed the financial agents of the Company in Europe. The contracts with the Southern Improvement Company, concerning the transportation of oil, were referred to a committee, to report next Tuesday. A partial financial statement was presented by the Treasurer, Mr. SHERMAN, together with an account of leases and contracts. This was referred to the appropriate Committee. Mr. TRAVERS was requested to draw up a statement of the condition of the consolidated bonds for the Stock Exchange. The Board then adjourned until Tuesday.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Thursday, March 14.

Mr. SUMNER presented a petition from citizens of New-Bedford, Mass., asking measures for the protection of the walrus on the Arctic Seas. Mr. MORRILL, of Vermont, from the Committee of Conference on the bill providing for the erection of public buildings at St. Louis, Mo., made a report which was concurred in. The report provides that the amount of the appropriation fixed by the House shall not be increased. Mr. LOGAN introduced a bill to provide for furnishing trusses for disabled soldiers.

DESIRE FOR PRACTICAL WORK.

Mr. SHERMAN offered a resolution to give the Tariff bill precedence on Monday next over all other business, but objection was made and it went over.

Mr. SHERMAN then asked unanimous consent that the Tariff bill should be taken up as soon as the pending Appropriation bill should be disposed of.

Mr. WRIGHT insisted that the Chicago Relief bill should be taken up after the Appropriation bill.

Mr. LOGAN said that if that bill should not pass within ten days it would be of little benefit to the people of Chicago.

Mr. CHANDLER insisted that the bills of the Committee on Commerce should be considered on Monday next.

Mr. FENTON said he would object to any understanding which would interfere with the early consideration of the bill for the reform of the Customs service.

Mr. TRUMBULL said he was anxious to have something done with the tariff, but he believed that if the bill reported by Mr. SHERMAN should be passed by the Senate the House would lay it on the table on the ground that the Senate had no right to originate a Revenue bill. The proper course would be to take up the House bills to repeal the duties on tea and coffee and coals, and act upon them separately.

Mr. SHERMAN insisted that the bill reported by him was not an original measure, but only an amendment of the House bill.

Mr. SCOTT took the same view.

Mr. CONKLING said that the Senate had a right to amend the House bill at its discretion. The mails came to him every morning burdened with complaints of the derangement of business resulting from the prevailing uncertainty as to what was to be done with the tariff, and therefore he would stand by Mr. SHERMAN in pressing the pending Tariff bill.

APPROPRIATION BILL.

Without voting on the question the Senate resumed the consideration of the Legislative Appropriation bill. The pending question was on the amendment to increase the salaries of United States District Judges to $5,000. This amendment was adopted, and also the amendment increasing the salaries of the Judges of the Court of Claims to $5,000.

Mr. TRUMBULL offered an amendment providing for the transfer of the Judges from one district to another, according to the exigencies of the occasion, which was adopted, and also an amendment appropriating the amount necessary to pay the increased salaries, which was adopted. The bill was then passed.

TARIFF BILL.

Mr. SHERMAN moved to take up the Tariff bill. Messrs. TRUMBULL, LOGAN and WRIGHT protested the immediate consideration of the Chicago Relief bill. After some discussion, the Tariff bill was taken up, with the understanding that the Chicago Relief bill shall be considered on Monday next. The Tariff bill was then read.

Mr. SCOTT gave notice of an amendment making tea and coffee free.

The Senate then, at 3¼ o'clock, went into Executive Session, and soon after adjourned.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. BLAIR, of Michigan, from the Committee on Claims, reported a bill appropriating $337,000 to reimburse the State of Kansas for moneys expended for the amounts assumed and the disbursements made in enrolling, equipping, arming, subsisting, transporting and paying the troops called into service by the Governor on the requisition of Maj.-Gen. CURTIS, in 1864, to repel the invasion of the rebel forces under Gen. PRICE. After explanation by Mr. BLAIR, the bill was passed. Mr. BLAIR also reported a bill authorizing the Southern Claims Commissioners to appoint special Commissioners to take the testimony in cases pending before the Commission. After considerable discussion the bill was passed. A large number of private bills were reported from the Committee of Claims and passed, including some for the remission of taxes on spirits destroyed by the great fire of Chicago.

REPORTS FROM COMMITTEES.

Mr. MCCRARY, from the Committee on Elections, made a report on the long contested election case of MORRIS against HAUDLEY, with a resolution that Mr. HAUDLEY, the sitting member, is entitled to the seat. He gave notice that he would call it up next Thursday.

Mr. SHELDON, from the Committee on Commerce, reported a bill to change the boundaries of the election district of Brazos de Santiago, Texas, which was passed.

RAILROAD BILL.

At 1¼ o'clock the House, by special appointment, took up the Senate bill to extend the time for the State of Wisconsin to complete a railroad from Lake St. Croix to Lake Superior, with the amendments reported by Mr. KETCHAM from the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. KETCHAM, Chairman of the Committee on Public Lands, gave notice that he would move the previous question at 4 o'clock. He said he had reported back the bill and amendments by order of the House, and he proceeded to give a history of the road and to call attention to some important facts which had come to his knowledge since he last addressed him in opposing any legislation reviving the grant.

Mr. BARBER replied to Mr. KETCHAM, and advocated the passage of the bill as it came from the Senate.

Mr. TYNER said he had never yet voted for a land grant, never would. He had no question but that the failure to complete the road within the time fixed had resulted in the forfeiture of the lands to the United States.

Mr. COX denounced the railroad land grant monopolists, and remarking that opposition to them came at last from the State of Pennsylvania, because she could not sell railroad iron to them.

Mr. HOLMAN moved to amend Mr. KETCHAM's substitute by adding to it a provision that no part of these lands shall be selected by or inure to the benefit of any railroad company under any assumed grant from the United States, but that they shall be expressly reserved for the benefit of actual settlers under the provisions of the Homestead act.

Mr. KETCHAM accepted the amendment and modified his substitute accordingly.

Mr. CONGER argued in favor of the Senate bill. He declared that the idea of the admission of new States on an equal footing with the old States was a fraud and a pretense. The thirteen original States came into the Union possessed of every acre of land within their limits, whereas the new States did not possess an acre of the unoccupied lands within their limits. This made a great distinction between them, and took away the force of the provisions to land grants for internal improvements in the new States.

Mr. BANKS argued in support of the bill as being for the building of a local road to which the usual objection to land grants did not apply. The previous question was then seconded, and the bill went over till to-morrow.

CUSTOM-HOUSE AT ST. LOUIS.

Mr. GARFIELD, from the Conference Committee on the bill for the St. Louis Custom-house, made a report appropriating $500,000 for the site and $1,750,000 for the building. The report was agreed to. The House then adjourned, at 5 P. M.

Death of Detective Lambrecht—His Murderer in Custody.

Detective PHILIP LAMBRECHT, of the Nineteenth Precinct, expired at St. Luke's Hospital at 8 o'clock yesterday morning, from injuries received by being struck on the head with a heavy slab of marble by GEORGE LAVERTY, during a fracas at the corner of Fifty-ninth-street and Second-avenue, on the morning of the 26th ult. On the night of the 25th ult. a gang of ruffians created a disturbance in the lager-beer-saloon of LOUIS MULLER, No. 1,852 First-avenue. Patrolman TULLY, of the Nineteenth Precinct, who had rendered himself particularly obnoxious to the rough characters infesting the Nineteenth Ward, by the prompt discharge of his duty, entered the place for the purpose of quelling the disturbance, and was heavily maltreated by the gang. Detective LAMBRECHT, Roundsman WEBB and Patrolman TOOKER were sent to scour the neighborhood in search of the ruffians. The policemen were in plain clothes, and at the corner of Fifty-ninth-street and Second-avenue met a party of five or six drunken laborers who attacked them. The officers defended themselves, and Detective LAMBRECHT drew his revolver, fired one shot at his assailants, when GEO. LAVERTY, one of the ruffians, came up behind him and struck him on the back of the head with a heavy slab of marble. Some other policemen having been attracted to the spot, the assailants were arrested and taken to the station-house. LAMBRECHT was taken to St. Luke's Hospital. His skull was badly fractured, and he expired yesterday morning. The deceased officer was about twenty-seven years of age, and was always a terror to the ruffians and thieves who infest the Eighteenth Ward. GEO. LAVERTY is retained to await the action of the Coroner. His brother, WM. LAVERTY, whose arm was broken during the affray, and the other assailants, are at present in the Penitentiary, where they were sent for the assault upon Officers TOOKER and WEBB. An inquest will be held in the case by Coroner SCHIRMER, on Saturday.

Still Further Indictments Against Jersey City Officials.

Pleas were yesterday entered before Judge BEDLE, in the Hudson County Court, to twenty additional indictments found against members of the Board of Public Works. These indictments charge five of the Commissioners—Messrs. Gillett, Ingwerson, Startup, Bray and Welsh—with having granted contracts to several persons, without having required bonds in the amounts specified by law. There are four indictments against each one of the Commissioners arraigned. Pleas of not guilty were entered in every case, and the Court required $1,000 bail on each indictment. Mr. T. E. Bray gave bonds for Mr. Gillett, and Mr. Gillett for Mr. Bray; Mr. N. H. Coykendall for Mr. Startup; Mr. W. Van Keuren for Mr. Welsh, and Mr. J. J. Bronson for Mr. Ingwerson.

A Warning to Furniture Dealers.

Two furniture dealers, doing business at No. 151 Chatham-street, New-York, were yesterday taken to Jersey City to answer a charge of larceny preferred by a Mrs. FITZ, residing on South First-street. The woman had failed to make payment on some goods which had been purchased from the defendants, to be paid for in installments, and they had come to her house and taken away the goods by force. They were lodged in the county jail to await trial.

ALEXIS.

The Grand Duke's Sojourn in Havana—The Ball at the Palace—A Sunday Cock-Fight—A Trip to Matanzas—At the Theatre—A Festive Week.

From Our Special Correspondent.

HAVANA, Saturday, March 9, 1872.

Duke ALEXIS continues to engross attention, and as the many festivities in his honor have exhausted that portion of the Havanese who are seen everywhere, it is about time that the Duke should carry his resolution of leaving into effect. There is always the same audience in Havana; the people you see at the opera are seen on the Paseo, at the receptions of the wealthier classes, and on all public occasions. The round of festivities began on Sunday morning; of course some went to church, and others didn't, but all took care to go to the village of Marianao and attend a cock-fight. The bells of the churches rang merrily and the Duke passed by the little chapel on his way to the cock-pit, followed by different Spanish dignitaries, some naval officers, the incumbent of the United States Consulate, and by the gamblers and other bad characters who attend cock-fights. The different mains over, the whole party, including many who pretend to be great Cuban sympathizers, adjourned to the house of Col. JULIAN ZULNETA, of the Volunteers, to partake of a lunch, and when they had indulged their vanity and satisfied their appetite they returned to the city.

THE PALACE BALL.

The pleasures of the cock-fight over, a short time was allowed for recuperation before the ball given in honor of the Prince by the Ayuntamiento (City Council) of Havana, at the Palace. Gigantic preparations had been made, and tickets had been distributed profusely. By 10 o'clock, the whole of the Palace, which had been thrown open for the occasion, was crowded, there being hardly room to pass around. The rooms had been tastefully, though simply decorated, both the Palace proper of the Captain-General, and the halls of the Ayuntamiento, in the other wings of the building, being thrown open. The entrance to the Palace was brilliantly illuminated, and over the doorway was hung in gas-jets the inscription, "Viva Amadeo I.," ("Long live AMADEUS the First.") At 10½ the Prince arrived, and was received by the Captain-General, a deputation of the Ayuntamiento, and with military honors from the battalion of Volunteers on guard, their band playing the Russian national hymn while the Prince ascended the staircase. This staircase deserves a passing notice, owing to the richness and quantity of exotics which lined either side. On the Prince's appearance in the saloons, the two orchestras, stationed in opposite wings of the Palace, struck up the Spanish royal march, after which the opening quadrille was at once formed, the royal guest leading, with the Countess of GIRACOA. Then the dancing became general, and there was such a number of couples who were eager to participate in the round dances that it was impossible for all to be satisfied. But when it is estimated that over four thousand people were present during the evening, the almost insurmountable difficulty of securing anything like comfort is easily explained. Supper was served at 1 o'clock, and after the Prince's appetite had been appeased, table after table was laid for the company. The crowd, of course, prevented a comfortable repast, but the display was splendid, and did much credit to "The Dominica," who had charge of everything. At 2 o'clock the Prince retired, but the dancing did not terminate till past 5, and the cock had crowed his warning long before the string of carriages received their weary occupants.

TRIP TO MATANZAS.

A special train was in waiting at the Regla Depot at 10 o'clock in the morning to conduct the Duke and suite to Matanzas, where he arrived in safety at midday, and was received by the Governor and Government officials, grandees, &c. He was driven in an open barouche to the Palace, the Volunteers forming an Indian file along the route. At the Palace a grand reception was held, after which the party repaired to the would-be Ducal residence on the top of Simpson's Hill—the Quinta of Dr. FELIX TORRES GONZALES. The streets were crowded with the populace and troops de circonstance. At 4 he visited the Valley of the Yumuri, and then returned to the Palace, four bands of music playing in the square. At 7 dinner began, lasting until 9, and a little later all adjourned to the ball given at the saloons of the Spanish Casino.

AT THE THEATRE.

After returning to Havana, the official visit to the theatre took place on Tuesday evening, the Prince having taken the opportunity to roam about the city from the time he returned from Matanzas until the evening; indeed, it is observed that he is always moving about incognito when possible. The opera selected for the occasion was "Martha," and it was sung by Mlles. DALTI, TESTA, and Signors TAMBERLICK and MARI. Of course, the artists exerted themselves to their utmost, and the theatre was crowded, the Prince applauding frequently; but there was an utter absence of bouquet throwing, which on such an occasion would be the thing in a New-York theatre. Before the performance commenced, the Russian national hymn was sung by all the company, the audience standing. Signor TAMBERLICK gave the solo in Russian, and brought down the house with this innovation.

A BULL-FIGHT.

A bull-fight had been arranged in honor of the Duke, and at 4 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon the immense Plaza de Toros was crowded to its utmost capacity, nearly eleven thousand spectators being present, including a number wearing ladies' apparel. The usual disgusting scenes were witnessed, and horses gored by the bulls ran about with their entrails protruding, much to the delight of the refined audience. But if Havana can boast of such brutal sport, it had also a more pleasing spectacle to view, for the same evening, on board of the frigate Gerona, the naval ball occurred, and this was a delightful affair.

THE DUKE'S DEPARTURE.

It was expected that ALEXIS would leave today, but his departure will hardly take place before Wednesday. The Abreck returns to Russia, and the other two ships will proceed from here to Rio Janeiro. QUASIMODO.

A Busy Day in the Court of General Sessions—Sentences Yesterday.

HENRY NEUMAN, alias Dutch Heinrichs, was arraigned in the Court of General Sessions yesterday charged with the theft of bonds. His counsel were allowed by the Recorder until Tuesday next to prepare a special plea, the prisoner being remanded.

LIBBY DAVIS and Mme. ST. VALERIE, confidence women, charged with swindling several dry-goods firms. They pleaded not guilty, and will be tried next Tuesday. JOHN MCG

THE SAVINGS BANKS.

Walter Roche and the Bowling-Green Depositors—Mr. Worth and the Proceedings in Bankruptcy.

The furniture and fixtures of the Bowling-green Savings Bank will be sold by auction, in the first week in April, and the receiver of the bank, Mr. KNAPP, will remove to an office in the neighborhood, until the winding up of the affairs of the bank. The Depositors' Committee have, for the last week, been actively endeavoring to bring WALTER ROCHE to terms. They are willing to compromise with him, as they have already done in "HANK" SMITH'S case; but the offers so far made by ROCHE have been so ridiculously small compared with his liabilities that they could not be accepted. The Committee state that they intend giving ROCHE only a few days more in which to come to their terms, failing in which they will immediately institute both civil and criminal proceedings against him. They have within the last few days gathered further proofs of his criminal liability in the suspension of the bank, upon which their counsel advise them they can hold him liable for nearly the entire deficit.

The Market Savings Bank.

The postponement of the election of assignee in bankruptcy of the Market Savings Bank has caused considerable commotion among the depositors, many of whom assembled yesterday at the banking-house to hear what the receiver, Mr. WORTH, had to say upon the subject. Mr. WORTH said that the postponement was unfortunately unavoidable, and any unnecessary delay in the bankruptcy proceedings was to be attributed to the petitioner in bankruptcy, and the bankrupt law, and certainly not either to his counsel or himself. The petitioner, Mr. WORTH stated, had to entirely in his own power to hasten the bankruptcy proceedings, but he, Mr. WORTH, feared the petitioner was purposely delaying the proceedings in the hope of obtaining a full settlement of his claim from him. Further, Mr. WORTH said that the postponement completely frustrates all his attempts to call in the loans. It was expected that a dividend of twenty-five per cent. would be paid on the 15th of April, but as affairs now stand, it is feared that the payment of this dividend will have to be postponed.

The Depositors' Investigating Committee met again today, and they expect to be able to publish a statement of the entire results of their investigations next week.

Controller GREEN made the following payments yesterday:

There was also paid the sum of $3,000 to 102 persons, for services as inspectors, &c., at last election.

Department of Docks—The Condition of the Piers.]

The Commissioners of Docks met yesterday, Commissioner AGNEW in the chair.

An application was read from a Superintendent asking that portions of certain piers on the North and East Rivers be repaired.

Commissioner WOOD said that the enterprise of our merchants was hindered by the action of the Controller refusing to obey the order of the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund directing $1,000,000 worth of bonds to be negotiated and placed at the disposal of the Department of Docks.

Commissioner AGNEW said that all the piers in the City except those belonging to private parties were in good order.

Commissioner WOOD introduced a resolution which was adopted directing the Chief Engineer to place before the Commissioners at their next meeting a map of that part of the river front extending from Harlem River, at Sixtieth-street, to Grand-street, at the East River.

The meeting then adjourned.

Gov. Hoffman Grants a Requisition for the Arrest of a Forger—Judge Cardozo Counteracts it.

SPENCE PETTUS, who has been frequently arrested by the Police in this and other cities, and who is looked upon as the most accomplished and expert forger in the country, was taken into custody on Wednesday last by one of the Central Office detectives, and he is now confined at Police Head-quarters. PETTUS was arrested on a requisition issued by Gov. HOFFMANN at the request of Gov. WASHBURN, of Massachusetts, on a charge of having obtained $10,000 worth of bonds from BOWLES BROS., of Boston, by means of a forged check. Detectives WADE and PINKHAM, of the Boston Police force, arrived here on Tuesday last, armed with a warrant from the Governor of Massachusetts for his arrest. They proceeded to Albany, and Gov. HOFFMAN granted a requisition for his rendition to the authorities of Massachusetts. After PETTUS had been secured, instead of being taken to Boston on the next train, he was locked up at Police Head-quarters for the night. Early yesterday morning Capt. IRVING, of the Detective Police, was served with a writ of habeas corpus, issued by Judge CARDOZO, of the Supreme Court, directing the Captain to produce the prisoner before him on Saturday next for examination. This, of course, prevents the Boston officers from taking their man to that city for trial, much to his gratification. PETTUS says that the crime with which he is charged was committed over a year ago, and of course he claims to be entirely innocent. He further contends that he has been tried twice for the offense and been acquitted on each occasion, and that the present arrest was made at the instigation of the Boston officers for the purpose of black-mailing him, and with this view of the case the brilliant detective who arrested him appeared to coincide. It is also said that PETTUS has been tried before as a principal in the forgery, and he is now indicted as an accessory. The accused is locked up at Police Head-quarters to await further developments.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

Before Judge Blatchford.

IN ADMIRALTY.

James A. Hewlett and Henry Torrance vs. The Bark Antoinette C.—This was a suit to recover the value of certain grain bags damaged while in the hold of the bark by contact with certain bleaching powders and sea water. The claimants alleged that the damage was caused by the ordinary accidents and perils of the sea. Judge BLATCHFORD, in his decision, says that the casks in which the soda ash and bleaching powder were stored were wet by water penetrating through the skin of the ship; this caused the casks to rot and burst, and the ash mixed with the water, and reached the bags, and saturated and burned them. If the water had not leaked in, the casks would not have been wet, and the bags consequently, would not have been burned. To stow casks of bleaching powder in such a way that they can be wet cannot be regarded as a peril of the sea. The loss is shown to be one which could have been avoided by ordinary care. Decree for the libellants, with costs, with reference to ascertain damages.

SUPREME COURT—CIRCUIT—PART I.—MARCH 14.

Before Judge Barrett and a Jury.

OVERPAID DUTIES.

Benjamin L. Ludington vs. Isaac B. Blumenthal.—This is an action to recover $800, in gold, claimed to be due plaintiff from defendant, under a contract to reclaim from the Government of the United States overpaid duties on certain specified articles of importation. It appeared that plaintiff, who was formerly an appraiser in the Custom-house, entered into a contract, with power of attorney attached, with a number of importers in this City, to reclaim from the Government of the United States duties alleged to have been overcharged in violation of the tariff laws. In the contract it was provided that plaintiff should receive fifty per cent. of the amount reclaimed. On the part of the defendant it was claimed that he signed the power of attorney, supposing it to be that only, and that he had a verbal contract with plaintiff to collect the overpaid duties for a fixed compensation of $250.

The jury found in favor of plaintiff for $877 17.

SUPERIOR COURT—GENERAL TERM—MARCH 14.

Before Judges Monell, Freedman and Curtis.

INJURIES BY A STREET-CAR.

Mary Poulin vs. The Broadway and Seventh-avenue Railroad.—This is an action to recover damages for injuries sustained by having plaintiff's hooped skirt caught on a nail in the platform of the car. The case was tried before Chief-Justice Barbour, and a verdict rendered in favor of plaintiff for $2,500. From that judgment an appeal was taken to the General Term and there argued, but the Judges disagreeing, a second argument was ordered, which was heard today. The Court reserved its decision.

THURSDAY, March 14—P. M.

The Treasury bought $1,000,000 United States 5-20s for the Sinking Fund today, at 108.98 to 109.38 ⅌ cent. and accrued Gold interest, out of a gross offering of $3,087,000. The Public Funds in the open market were steady on the 5-20s of 1867 and the new 5 ⅌ cents, while a concession was made on the sale of $100,000 of 5-20s of 1868, Registered Stock, at 111¼ ⅌ cent., at the Second Board.

In the Foreign Exchanges, one or more of the Banking houses accepted 109¼ ⅌ cent. on London, less a brokerage, while other leading drawers were firm at 109¾ ⅌ cent. There was no shadow of turning, either way, in the Gold Room, most of the sales being at 110¼ ⅌ cent.

There was rather less pressure for Money from the Brokers, and the commissions over 7 ⅌ cent. paid for carrying over Stocks were less frequent than earlier in the week.

On the Stock Exchange the dealings in Erie Stock were the attraction of the market, and the amount of business done was over 50,000 shares, at an advance of 1@2 ⅌ cent. on the last price of Wednesday. The orders for the Stock, for the greater part, are believed to come from London and Amsterdam, or else prompted by parties here in intimate correspondence with the Bischoffsheim-McHenry interest in London. It is also intimated that the New-York Certificates of Stock, without the countersign of the London Protection Committee—HEATH and RAPHAEL—will again be current in the London market, and that as soon as the transfers here, ceased on Tuesday, are reopened, a large amount of Ten Share Certificates will go to Europe. There was no let up in the active demand for the Stock today, although the other New-York and Western Roads were, at one time, quite dull,

The New-York Times.
DAILY, WEEKLY AND SEMI-WEEKLY.

This journal is now thoroughly identified with the greatest political necessity of the hour—uncompromising warfare against all forms of corruption, whether in national or local government. For years past the TIMES has been exposing the demoralizing schemes of self-interested politicians, and its recent warfare upon the Tammany Democrats has been received with universal approval. It has adhered to the pledge given in its original prospectus, more than twenty years ago, that the public should be truly represented, and their interests faithfully guarded through its columns. Its record has been pure and honorable, and the highest aim of its proprietors is to render it more and more worthy of its past history, and of the confidence which the public repose in it. Two out of three of the original proprietors still direct its policy, and guide it on all public questions. They purpose that the TIMES shall continue to keep clear of all narrow and unworthy influences and cliques, and aim to represent the great body of the public, as distinguished from personal factions. It occupies a perfectly independent position, and is free to speak the truth on all subjects and about all men. Its greatly increased circulation throughout the country adds to its power and influence. It will continue to be a faithful exponent of Republican principles, and advocate with untiring energy every cause which tends to further the welfare of the people.

The utmost care will be devoted to gathering political news from special sources during the Presidential canvass. This department of the paper will be unusually full and trustworthy. Renewed enterprise will be exhibited in every department of the paper, and large space will be devoted to reports of speeches made during elections, or on other important political occasions.

A very full summary of news, and many general articles of great interest, are published in the Semi-weekly editions; and in the Weekly edition there is an unabridged report of the proceedings at the Farmers' Club, an excellent summary of political information, and a great variety of matter suitable for family reading.

The NEW-YORK TIMES is pre-eminently a family paper, all objectionable advertisements being rigidly excluded; and it has a constantly increasing circulation among the most respectable classes of the community.

When President GRANT entered office, he found the public service demoralized in all directions by the corrupt Administration of "ANDY" JOHNSON. In the course of three years he has carried out or proposed many valuable reforms; the public debt has been decreased three hundred millions, thus effecting a reduction in the interest of eighteen millions annually; taxes have been largely reduced; an honorable effort has been made to settle our differences peaceably with England; and the welfare of the whole people has been consistently studied. Does any one suppose that the Convention of soreheads and bolters at Cincinnati will find a man to do better work than this? Has HORACE GREELEY or CARL SCHURZ a better claim upon public respect than Gen. GRANT?

We do not pretend to be in the secrets of the new combination which has obtained possession of the Erie road, and therefore we speak in the dark—but it seems to us that the presence of JAY GOULD as a director at the Board throws suspicion on the entire proceedings. It may be said that the new directors cannot turn out JAY GOULD, but if we are not mistaken, the same means which they used to induce GOULD to resign his chairmanship would amply suffice to get rid of him altogether. The Direction has all the books and papers of the Company at its disposal, and they are quite enough—unless we are greatly misinformed—to transfer JAY GOULD from the Grand Opera-house to a State Prison. This was the rod held over the swindler's head on Tuesday, and it scared him into a surrender. The public will not regard with favor anything which looks like a compromise with JAY GOULD. If there is evidence enough to convict him, why not use it in the proper manner, and thus rid the community at once of a man who has long been a disgrace to it?

The Judiciary Committee of the Legislature will today resume their investigations into the conduct of the accused Judges, at the Fifth-avenue Hotel. Once more we appeal to lawyers and others to come forward with their evidence. But even in the absence of specific evidence, we maintain that in the general and notorious public scandals involved in the actions of the corrupt Judges, there is ground enough for their removal. If the Legislatures does not get rid of these Judges before it rises, we shall see an exercise of tyranny in the name of law never equaled in civilized annals. The accused Judges are still in league with the members of the Ring, and there is no safety for the community while they remain on the Bench. We earnestly ask the Legislature to attend to this subject. A new charter will be of little use to us unless we once more render it possible to secure justice in our Courts.

Mr. NAST has drawn some excellent likenesses of CARL SCHURZ, the man whose oratory casts that of WEBSTER and CLAY into the shade—vide the Nation passim—in the new number of Harper's Weekly. We see SCHURZ trying to incite Germany to take vengeance upon the United States for our alleged breach of neutrality, and on another page we have a series of sketches taken in the Senate, in all of which the man of the unquailing heart, &c., &c., is depicted to the utmost advantage. It is no doubt the height of profanity to caricature that blessed angel SCHURZ, but Mr. NAST has done it, and in the present depraved state of mankind, people will be found to laugh heartily at these pictures. We hear, by the bye, that Mr. NAST has been engaged to make sketches of some of our public men for Vanity Fair, the well-known English publication—an excellent thought of the conductors of that journal.

State Senator WOOD makes no sign of doing the only thing which he can do after the report of Messrs. AMES and ALLEN—placing his resignation in the hands of the Senate. We are far from urging that the Senate ought to refrain from formally expelling a member who has been morally, if not legally convicted of taking bribes from TWEED and GOULD. The curse of the Legislatures of 1870-71 was the purchasable Republicans who sat in them. From the Democrats we knew what to expect, but while corrupt men were found among the party which had to oppose the swindling legislation of Tammany, it was obviously impossible to defeat any scheme, however infamous. It is clear that Senator WOOD has belonged to this class, and while he would best consult his own self-respect by immediately resigning, it is a fair question for his associates to consider whether they would not best consult the dignity of the Senate by formally expelling him. The Tribune says it knows of other Senators equally guilty. If it has the slightest concern for public decency or public justice let it reveal the names, instead of holding them back as a menace in the interests of Senator FENTON.

Senator SCHURZ appeared again yesterday, as counsel for Germany, before the Senate Committee inquiring into the sale of arms. He has a pleasant habit, it appears, of putting words into the mouths of witnesses, and then telegraphing his questions as their answers to all parts of the country. This disgraceful trick aroused the indignation of the Chairman, Senator HAMLIN, and yesterday he remonstrated with SCHURZ—a piece of presumption which will bring down on Mr. HAMLIN'S head the dire wrath of all SCHURZ'S "organs," and cause him to be denounced as a disgrace to the country. But people generally will recognize the justice of Senator HAMLIN'S protest against a pettifogging trick, and the counsel for Germany will be obliged to keep within decent bounds. Under these circumstances, we may expect to see him at any moment throwing up his case, and accusing the Committee of being in league with thieves, &c.

Are the people aware that HAGERTY, the voucher-thief, still holds the position of Janitor of the new Court-house, and that his family occupy elegant apartments, copiously supplied with INGERSOLL'S carpets, in that very costly building? It was highly considerate and thoughtful of Chamberlain BRADLEY to get a special clause inserted in the County Tax Levy of 1870 giving him the power of appointing the Court-house Janitor. Then, when he had found a man admirably fitted for any dirty work that might be required, and who, in fact, did perform a highly valuable service to the Ring, it was equally creditable to the head and the heart of the "respectable" BRADLEY to continue to pay this faithful servant $2,000 a year of public money, even after his excessive devotion had brought him to a cell in the Tombs. When Mr. F. A. PALMER, President of the Broadway Bank, and lessor of a stable-loft to the City at a rental of $18,000 a year, was appointed Chamberlain, he stated his intention of putting an end to what some people considered a public scandal. He thought better of it, however, and HAGERTY has the satisfaction of living in the Tombs at the public expense, of having his family accommodated rent free by a grateful community, and of drawing public money to assist him in defending the case which the people have against him.

What has become of the bill introduced into the Assembly by Mr. MACKAY removing the Tammany Court-house Commissioners? One would imagine that a Republican Legislature need have no difficulty in making up its mind to dismiss the following precious set of worthies:

Commissioners of County Court-house—Thos. Coman, Michael Norton, James H. Ingersoll, John J. Walsh.

Commissioners of Third District Court-house—Thomas Canary, (partner of Mike Norton;) John Cox, (Justice of the Court;) E. J. Shandley, (Justice of the Court.)

Commissioners of Ninth District Court-house—Wm. M. Tweed, Josiah Porter, (Justice of the Court;) John McQuade, (Justice of the Court.)

Would the people of New-York like to hear of these men getting control once more of the spending of their money? Yet, until the Legislature removes them, they have a legal right to make requisitions upon the Controller for the issue of bonds, &c. Let the Republicans at Albany take note of it; we cannot wait till these persons go out under the new charter, they must be kicked out.

The extent to which the suffrage had become corrupted under the teachings and example of Tammany is forcibly set forth in the report of the meeting at the Brooklyn Academy of Music last evening. It will be perceived that the proceedings were participated in by Democrats and Republicans alike. Brooklyn is a likely place for a good Registry law and an efficient Police.

The Cincinnati Movement.

The Cincinnati "Convention," as its friends like to call it, is the cause of much bickering and discontent among those who are looking to it to further their special ends. It was originally the work of the radical revenue reformers of Missouri, and the plain doctrine set forth on the subject of the tariff, by the Lexington meeting which called it, was freely commented on by Democrats and Republican free traders as an element of great importance in the scheme. But there is now a movement on foot to eliminate this element in the interest of the discontented Republicans who find it inconvenient to accept it. A prominent advocate of the Cincinnati meeting declares publicly that "Republican politicians who have no single bond of union with the 'Liberal Republicans,' except their dissatisfaction with the present Administration, have offered to join the movement, and are even now negotiating for a place on the Cincinnati ticket, to be given to the most conspicuous enemy of tariff reform in the country."

On the other hand, the Democrats are straining every nerve to get control of the movement, and to be able to engineer it in such a manner as to bring grist to their mill. The advocates of the passive policy are seeking to induce the Convention to make a nomination, and one that the Democracy can be prevailed on to follow. The more pronounced Democrats are also at work seeking a nomination, but one which, while it might possibly draw a few votes from the Republican candidate in doubtful States, would be of a character that the Democrats could not be asked to put up with. Strange to say, all these factions find in the result of the New-Hampshire election ample confirmation of their particular arguments. At the rate that the scramble is now going on, there is positively no limit that can be put to the number of contending cliques which will appear at Cincinnati. It will be little short of a political menagerie, in which each species of Republican and Democratic carnivora will be represented. If they show half the obstinacy in quarreling with each other that they have shown in opposing the great body of their fellow-citizens on the question of Gen. GRANT'S re-election, they will be very far from being a "happy family."

Meanwhile, the Republican Party proceeds with the business of the hour with no sign of concern as to the upshot of the Cincinnati trick. State after State is selecting its delegates to the National Convention, with entire unanimity as to the action which that Convention should take on the Presidency, and as to the principles it should announce. The party organization never showed itself more capable of responding to the real wishes of the party, and never worked with less of real or apparent friction, and no Convention ever embodied the general views of the people more completely than the Republican Convention of this year bids fair to do.

Our Pacific Trade.

The interesting debate in the House of Representatives on Tuesday, relating to the mail service to China and Japan, will be carefully read all over the country, and the fate of Mr. CONGER'S amendment will be watched with interest. Mr. CONGER offered an amendment to the Post-office bill, proposing to double the subsidy for the mail service to China, provided that the service be made semi-monthly, and in ships of American construction. It is observable that the debate derives additional interest and importance from the circumstance that Secretary ROBESON'S Report, embodying very strong recommendations for the encouragement of our steam commerce in the Pacific, was sent in to the House on the following day.

In the discussion that followed Mr. CONGER'S motion, we find that Mr. BUTLER of Massachusetts, Mr. KERR of Indiana, and Mr. WOOD of New-York were strongly opposed to it; and that Mr. SARGENT of California, Mr. GARFIELD of Ohio, Mr. BROOKS of New-York, Mr. DAWES of Massachusetts, and Mr. KELLEY of Pennsylvania, were strenuously in its behalf. Mr. SARGENT assured the House that, were the subsidy given, the steam-ship service from California to China and Japan would be instantly increased from one to three trips a month, without further expense to Government, and that in two years the service would be weekly. He showed that the amount granted to the "P. and O." Company by the English Government is more than four times, in gold, what is now received by our Transpacific service; and demonstrated that the amount of revenue derived from the trade with China, carried on through the Pacific Mail Steam-ship Company, more than repaid the Government for the subsidy allowed to it. Mr. BROOKS, who has lately been all over the ground in person, declared that a struggle was now going on between Great Britain and this country for the vast trade of these Eastern seas, and that it concerned our Government to give every possible encouragement in that struggle to our own flag. He entreated the House not to look on the question as one of mere money, or private interest, or of party, but as one of great national importance. It was a matter involving the trade of over six hundred millions of people, and would certainly involve the future wealth and prosperity of our whole country.

Mr. GARFIELD said he was opposed to subsidies on general principles, and should continue to be opposed to them. But he "believed that there were such special facts surrounding the question of trade on the Pacific Ocean that Congress dare not, in view of the situation, neglect it." No less emphatic, in the same direction, were the views expressed by Mr. DAWES. He had no hesitation in saying that he knew of no such judicious appropriation of money as that which would add to the channels of trade, and gather into the Custom-house of this country those revenues which would otherwise go to other nations to enrich their treasuries, their households, and their people. The arguments of other gentlemen favoring the amendment were in much the same strain, and, judging from the debate, it is probable that the general feeling of the House is strongly in its favor. The report of Secretary ROBESON, so far as it deals with the subject, is, if possible, even more emphatic and unequivocal. He urges that the commercial needs of the people of the Pacific slope are of an imperious character; that those needs are imperfectly provided for; and that it is the duty of the National Legislature to devise and encourage means for their relief. "Their productions," writes Mr. ROBESON, "increasing from day to day, have forced the opening of new markets across an ocean twice as broad as the Atlantic; and, if the past is permitted to speak for the future, the extent of that trade, properly fostered, within the next half century, can hardly be estimated." Mr. ROBESON devotes much space to show that the extension of the aid he recommends is consistent with the spirit and powers of our Government, and that "it may certainly be given without violation of constitutional principles or Government policy."

The grand objection to Mr. CONGER'S amendment will be, that it helps the Pacific Mail Steam-ship Company. That its adoption will have that effect cannot be disputed. But ought this to be a conclusive barrier to its adoption? If it tends to give a powerful stimulus to our Pacific trade, and of this there can be no doubt, and thus to enrich the whole country, we might surely bear up under the reflection that the Steam-ship Company got some advantage at the same time. This consideration will not fail, however, to be rightly estimated by the experienced legislators who are clearly giving the subject their best thought, and the country will certainly be willing to abide by their decision.

Tom Fields' Little Joker.

TOM FIELDS, smitten with a sudden fever for reform, and calling upon the Assembly to investigate the Corporation Counsel's office, is a curious and edifying spectacle. We must confess to a slight suspicion of his eleventh-hour zeal. Intrepid dwellers in the rural districts have sometimes snatched a fearful joy at fair or circus or militia muster, from the singular and exciting game, known as "the little joker." It is played with three thimbles, under one of which is placed a pea, and the game is to point out this particular thimble. Now this would not greatly tax the resources of the rustic mind, nor afford, perhaps, very exciting sport, were it not for the odd circumstance that when the intelligent bystander has picked out the thimble where he knows the pea to be, and backed his choice to win, the thimble is lifted and the pea is never there.

We do not know whether Mr. FIELDS has ever tasted the delights of this intellectual and fascinating pastime. But a modification of it he seems inclined to introduce for the amusement of the Assembly. Some time since, if we mistake not, Mr. FLAMMER offered a resolution, calling upon the Judiciary Committee to inquire into matters in the Corporation Counsel's office. We strongly suspect that Mr. FIELDS' resolution will be found to be an empty thimble, designed only to divert attention from this. Let the Assembly back Mr. FLAMMER'S thimble by all means.

Certainly, as the facts we published the other day show, the Corporation Counsel's office is in urgent need of legislative attention. And when the Investigating Committee does sit, it should not fail to explore the instructive history of the Street Opening Ring, which, for years past, is said to have found in that office a perfect El Dorado of easy wealth. Let it not neglect, above all, to trace with care the devious windings of that golden stream which has been flowing out so lavishly and so ceaselessly under Mr. O'GORMAN'S virtuous eyes. The Committee, we trust, will also inquire how that poor gentleman fared in this magnificent distribution of fortunes. It would be a pity, indeed, if, while clerks and surveyors and obscure underlings of all sorts were gleefully pocketing dollars by the hundred thousand, the master of the feast alone should go empty away. Two millions of dollars harvested in the Corporation Counsel's office in five years, and not a dollar for its noble chief! The notion is humiliating, but if it shall prove to be true, we trust that the Legislature will at once pass a special act requiring EDWARD J. WILSON, GEORGE W. PURSER, EDWARD BOYLE, and the rest of the lucky ones, to pay over to our modern Poor Richard his fair proportion of the spoils. Honor among—street-openers. Before this happens, however, let the Committee listen to the woful tale of Mr. EDWARD J. WILSON, whose honest share of the plunder, it is said, has been sadly docked by the rapacity of his worthy colleagues, and who is, therefore, not unwilling to tell all he knows about street-openings. Then our sympathy for the impoverished Corporation Counsel may be abated. And when they have finished with the Corporation Counsel, perhaps the Committee will take a look into the Corporation Attorney's office. Doubtless Mr. FIELDS' modesty forbade him to include that in his resolution.

Dreams and Crime.

No man doubts the insanity of the poor wretch MARQUARDT, who killed his wife a few days since, after having, with her aid, murdered their three children. The peculiar sort of religious insanity under which he labored is by no means rare. The symptoms exhibited both by himself and his wife have been often noticed in other religious maniacs. The homicidal tendencies of these persons when insanity is produced by morbid religious feelings, are well known to all physicians who are familiar with insanity. It would be interesting to trace the origin of these fancies. The uniformity with which religious maniacs insist upon stripping themselves, and the frequency with which they manifest murderous designs, would seem to point to some common cause. Insanity has so far been, in the estimation of most men, the very type of lawlessness, but it is not impossible that certain classes of symptoms may yet be shown to originate from uniform causes.

This, however, is a subject for the investigation of the physicians. There is another feature of the Marquardt tragedy which invites the comment of the layman—and that is the curious fact that the maniac, according to his own story, acted throughout like one under the influence of a dream. It is a characteristic of this dreamer that his successive ideas are determined by trivial causes. The waking man pursues a train of thought without heeding the intrusion of ideas which have no connection with it. The man in a dream may enter upon a process of reasoning, but the slightest suggestion conveyed to him through his dulled senses, or originating spontaneously in his brain, is sufficient to turn aside the current of his thoughts. He may be dreaming, for example, that he is in a bookstore, and that he notices a knife lying on the counter. The natural association between knives and dinner will probably abruptly change his vision, and in an instant he may imagine himself seated at the dinner-table. This peculiarity of dreams is familiar to every one, and the similarity between the mental processes of MARQUARDT, on the night when he committed his hideous murders, and those of the average dreamer is worth notice.

In the interview with the representative of a Western journal, MARQUARDT told the whole story of that terrible night. Believing that his children were in the power of devils, he and his wife agreed that it was necessary to put them out of the world, and so rid them of demoniacal persecution. Accordingly they took the three youngest children and went out into the woods. Presently they came to a narrow path, and the man was at once reminded of the strait gate and narrow path of the Gospels. "All must come to this narrow gate," he said to his wife, and they turned aside into its gloomy depths. It was thickly set about with thorns, and the maniac was then led to say, "There is the thorny path to heaven." It was here that the children were killed, so that their souls might be safe in heaven from the assaults of the devil. A pool of water was near at hand, and noticing it, the idea of purification immediately occurred to the lunatics. They stripped themselves, and after bathing returned to the house, where MARQUARDT finished the tragedy by strangling his wife, in order that she might accompany her children on the unknown road, which their innocent souls had already taken.

This reads precisely like the description of a dream. Whatever object arrested the attention of the maniac impelled his wild thoughts in a new direction. The narrow path for the moment dominates his mind, and he forgets the route which he had intended to take to turn aside, obedient to the religious idea awakened by the memory of a text in the Bible which the narrow path recalled. The thorns suggest some half-remembered lines in which the thorny path to heaven is described, and he at once is led by this association of ideas to select this spot as the place where his children shall be sent on their way to heaven. He washes himself, because the sight of water irresistibly impels him so to do; and when he reflects that his dead children are separated from their mother, he instantly conceives the idea of reuniting them by her death.

And through it all there is a further resemblance to the act of dreaming in the total want of any feeling of criminality or remorse which is evident in the man's conduct. The dreamer, as a rule, has no moral sense, and commits without fear or remorse acts from which, in his waking moments, he shrinks in horror. MARQUARDT killed his wife and children with the same deadness of morality and sentiment which he would have felt had the tragedy been in reality but the dream of his uneasy sleep. He is still dreaming—so far as his mental and moral condition is concerned, and the law will hold him as blameless as though he had never raised his hand against his family save in the fruitless imagination of his sleeping moments.

Who shall seize the secret that links the lunatic and the dreamer so closely together? Is the lunatic only a somnambulist, or is somnambulism the vestibule of the maniac's hell?

Oppression of Poor Children.

We regret to see that one or two Senators, from very intelligent districts in the interior of the State, have expressed themselves in opposition to one of the most humane and useful bills which have ever been before the Legislature. This is an act presented by the Children's Aid Society of this City, and drawn up with great care by Mr. C. E. WHITEHEAD, to protect and insure education for factory children of tender years. The benevolent visitors of this Association have ascertained that there is a vast number of children employed in the factories and trades of this City, and the rural districts, of very tender age, who never secure any education, and are growing up to swell that numerous illiterate class already such a source of danger to our free institutions. The careful investigations of these agents, as well as those of the National Commissioner of Education, show that there are trades in this City where from eight to ten thousand children under thirteen years are employed during ten hours a day; that infants as young as four and eight years are kept steadily at work by the greed of their parents; and that still other branches of business employ boys and girls from ten to twelve years by the thousand. In fact, they show that there is an army of young children, almost infants, who are laboring steadily at machines and in factories or shops, doing a man's full work with a child's strength, growing up thus, stunted and weakly in body and dwarfed in mind, to increase the mass of ignorance at the foundation of our society.

So imperfect, too, is the protection of these little ones from machinery, that the agent of the National Bureau of Education found in a night school six of these young factory children who had lost their forefingers. The experience of all manufacturing countries is that what with the greed of the parents, and the necessities of capitalists, the children of the poor are sacrificed. Paternal affection and the humanity of employers do not protect them from exacting labors and excessive drudgery. In these mills of competition and trade, the little ones of the world are ground up as if only material for production. Great Britain, and then the New-England States, have seen this oppression of the children of the poor, and have legislated stringently to protect them. The great manufacturing State of New-York alone has been behind-hand in this work of humanity. The present law, now before the Senate of this State, is framed carefully to protect the rights of the children, and not to hamper or annoy manufacturers. It provides first that no child whatever under ten years shall be employed for hire in any manufactory or mechanical shop, and no child under twelve who cannot read intelligibly, under a penalty of five dollars per day during which the child is so employed. The parent or guardian authorizing such employment is also liable to a penalty of twenty dollars.

This provision ought to completely uproot the practice so common in this City, of working very young children without regard to their opportunities for education. The next section forbids, under a penalty of ten dollars for each offense, any child under sixteen being employed more than sixty hours in one week, or after 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, or on certain holidays mentioned. This certainly is a requisition which no reasonable person could object to. The next section, however, is the important one, requiring every child between the ages of ten and sixteen, employed in any factory or shop, to attend school at least three months of the year, and to bring a written certificate from his teacher to that effect; the law, however, permitting attendance at half-time schools or night-schools for six months, to take the place of the three months' day-attendance. In cases in which there is more than one child of this age in a family, and the Overseers of the Poor certify that the labor of such children is essential to the support of the family, then the three months' schooling may be taken in alternate months, or at night-schools. Very strict regulations are made as to the registers which manufacturers are obliged to keep, showing all the necessary facts in regard to the child and the certificates of his school attendance. Heavy penalties are fixed on the violation of all these regulations. Even the parent or guardian who releases the child from work to attend the three months' school, is fined five dollars for every week of non-attendance; and the teacher giving a false certificate is liable to one hundred dollars' fine.

By these provisions both employers and parents are forced to see that the children are sent to school, and hardship is prevented by allowing the substitute of night-school attendance. Careful provisions are also made in this act for the protection of the health of the children in factories, and to guard them against accidents from machinery, to which they are so exposed. To carry out the law a State officer is to be appointed by the Governor, to be called the "Inspector of Factory Children," whose duty it shall be to examine the different factories to aid in the enforcement of the law, and to report annually to the Legislature in regard to the condition of this large class of children. The suits under this act may be brought by this officer, or by the District-Attorney or the School Commissioners, or Commissioners of Charities, before any Justice of the Peace or any Court of Record. One-half of the penalties recovered are to be paid to the school fund of the county, and one-half to the informer.

It would be a disgrace to our civilization if this most humane and skillful act did not pass the Legislature. And for ourselves, apart from the humanity of its provisions, we shall hail its passage as the first step toward the great reform indispensable to this country—"compulsory education."

An Unpleasant "Investigation."

Said the New-York Tribune of March 6:

"Let us rejoice, then, that Congress and many Legislatures are giving so much time and thought to investigations. They might be in much worse business; they could hardly be in better. Factions may suffer; reputations may be tarnished; gains may be retrenched; fast horses may fall in price; but the public will be the gainer. * * * So let investigations be multiplied and vigorously prosecuted to the utmost!"

Said the Tribune of March 14:

"Senator CONKLING has not satisfied himself that his petty resolution inquiring into the recommendations to office, made by his fellow-Senators, should be judiciously strangled."

Has the Tribune's ardor for investigations altogether evaporated in the course of eight days? The Tribune and its friends in the Senate have charged that the New-York Custom-house is filled with Senator CONKLING'S appointees. In fact, Senator CONKLING has never made a single recommendation of any Custom-house official. The "liberal" Senators have inveighed loudly against the abuses of Federal patronage, in open disregard of the fact that among their own ranks will be found men whose chief grievance is their inability to dispense as much patronage as they desired. All this would appear on investigation—a manner of reaching the truth which the Tribune cannot, under such circumstances, regard with favor. When the results of such an inquiry are fairly reached, the Tribune will still be able to treat them as it did the report of the Bowling-green Bank Depositors' Committee about its friend, HANK SMITH—ignore them.

MINOR TOPICS.

On the basis of Controller GREEN'S memorial, the Senate Committee on Cities have reported a bill fixing the Tax Levy for the year at two and three-quarters per cent., being equal to a sum of about thirty millions of dollars, for the City and County expenditures of the year. We trust that in considering this Tax Levy, the Legislature will not ignore the statement of the Controller that several of the estimates of the Departments are too high, and the further reminder that "as government is now constituted, there are thirteen Departments, besides numerous offices and other bodies, spending money without feeling any responsibility of raising it. Either economy must be practiced or a higher rate of taxation must inevitably follow." If we can set along with a lower rate of taxation, let the Controller be empowered to show where retrenchment can be effected.

We have received from Police Commissioner HANK SMITH a letter, in which he says, with regard to the case of the woman in male attire who claimed his acquaintance, and was reported to have been screened from justice by his intervention: "I do not now know, and never did know, the person alluded to in the article. By reason of severe indisposition, I have been unable to attend to business for several days past, and did not, therefore, know or hear of the case in question prior to this date. I have, therefore, no personal knowledge of the merits or demerits of the case to which you give such editorial prominence." We are very glad to give prominence to this very comprehensive disclaimer of HANK SMITH of any connection with a case which now becomes more mysterious than ever. We trust that his indisposition has sufficiently abated to permit him to make a searching investigation into the origin of so damaging and widely circulated a report. Were the Police concerned in the affair willing or unwilling believers in the woman's alleged intimacy with the President of the Board, and who are really responsible for the endeavor to keep the details from the public, and for the successful attempt to keep the case out of Court? After Police Commissioner SMITH has fulfilled his official duty by getting at these facts, he may possibly find leisure to tell us what he knows about the disposal of the funds belonging to policemen's widows, and of those subscribed by the force in behalf of the Chicago sufferers.

The friends of Register DWIGHT, who adjourned the meeting of the creditors of the Market Savings Bank on Wednesday last, and so prevented the election of an assignee until the 16th of April, take exception to the comments of the Press upon the matter. The nearly unanimous feeling of the creditors was that this postponement was an injury to their interests, and it was only natural that Mr. DWIGHT should be held accountable for it. His defense, however, seems to be a good one, inasmuch as he had no option but to postpone the election until the notices of the meeting had been properly served. The person who undertook to serve these notices, however, cannot be so easily excused. The claims of the creditors were all proved prior to the 28th of February, and the plea that the mailing of two thousand printed notices could not be done in less time than a month is simple nonsense. A few hours would have sufficed to direct the notices and deposit them in the Post-office. In a matter where there has been so much fraud as there has been in the failure of the Market Bank, the failure to notify the creditors of the meeting, thus postponing for another month their chances of recovering any part of their money, will be viewed with suspicion,—whether or not that suspicion is fully justified.

Promptness of action is a characteristic of Americans. They do not waste time when there is money to be made, an obnoxious enemy to be killed, or any other duty to be performed. In Corsica, where the vendetta is a nearly sacred institution, a private war may be carried on between two families for a century, and the belligerents will be entirely content if one man is killed once in thirty years. Note on the other hand the energy which the American infuses into his local feuds. The other day an American, somewhere in Arizona, was killed by a Mexican. His friends wasted no time, but instantly went out and shot a casual Mexican. The Mexicans, who, though a degenerate race, still have some of the virtues of republicans, collected their forces and sacrificed another American. In monarchical Corsica, the matter would have rested here for a half century at least. In free Arizona, what did these spirited Americans do? They instantly made a raid on a Mexican settlement, and killed four men in the handsomest style, and when a fifth man sought refuge in a town and declined to come out and be shot, they blew up the house and shot the man, doubtless as he was sailing through the air. Such is the energy and promptness of the noble borderers of the West.

In another column of the TIMES our readers will find a letter on the subject of International Copyright, from a point of view not generally discussed, either by the advocates or the opponents of that measure. The writer takes the ground that an author's right in his book is not, like ownership in land or other material property, a natural and inalienable but an acquired and artificial right, granted by the State for a specific purpose and for a limited time. This is the case in all countries where copyright exists. It is a right created by law, which would cease to exist were the law repealed. Hence our correspondent concludes that the plea for an International Copyright, based on the assumption of "moral" right and the inalienable ownership of the foreign author in his book, must be dismissed, and the subject discussed from the more practical standpoint of constitutionality and expediency; and should it be found that such a measure would retard instead of promoting "the progress of science and the useful arts" among the people, then Congress, in obedience to constitutional obligations and the interests of the people, must refrain from special legislation in favor of foreign authors. The subject is one of vast importance to this country, and legislation upon it cannot be too well considered.

The practice of supporting useless and insignificant newspapers out of the public Treasury, by giving them a share of the public advertising, was one of the many ways in which the Ring squandered the money of the tax-payers. It seems that this little game is familiar to the staid and respectable people of New-Jersey. A score of miserable little local sheets have been kept alive for some years past by the State advertising; and as there is now danger that the present fashion of reform will cut off their supplies, these little journals are blowing their penny whistles loudly, in the hope of drowning the cry for reform. It is only repeating a self-evident truth to say that the public advertising should be governed by the same rule as that which dictates to ordinary men the choice of an advertising medium. To publish advertisements in papers which have no circulation is simply to squander money and to pervert the statute to partisan and personal ends.

Look out for spicy reading in the TIMES of Sunday next. The "Beggar's Banquet" will be found to include a rich array of piquant dishes, and an endless variety of other good things will be provided.

LEGISLATIVE INQUIRY.

Investigations in Washington and Albany Yesterday.

Senator Schurz Rebuked by the Chairman of the Senate Arms Committee—Mr. Cresswell Vindicated—The Committee on the Navy—Judiciary and Printing Investigations.

THE ARMS INVESTIGATION.

The Sale of Arms—How the Contract With Garrison Fell Through—Senator Schurz Rebuked.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—The Senate arms investigation today was occupied with the examination of Brevet Col. SILAS CRISPIN, who conducted the great majority of the sales in New-York. There were no material developments beyond the testimony of this officer before the House Committee, already given in the TIMES at length. He testified positively that he never made or recommended sales to any parties known to be French agents; that he knew of no officer of the Government interested in the sales; that he himself made the sale to THOS. RICHARDSON, and did not at the time know him to be an agent of REMINGTON & SONS. The chief point sought to be made in the cross-examination by Mr. SCHURZ was that the deliveries on the sales to REMINGTON of Oct. 12 and 13 ought to have been stopped, but were not because of the desire of the Department to aid the French agents. The witnesses having testified that they regarded the Department bound by its contracts, SCHURZ sought to show that this was not true, and proceeded in his adroit way to instance a case, and to place a perverted statement of the facts in the mouth of the witness, and to ask him to swear to it. These tactics have been so uniformly resorted to by the Prosecuting-Attorney during the investigation thus far, that the Committee has become disgusted, especially as the members have invariably seen that these cunning questions, with their perverted answers, have been regularly telegraphed over the country as established facts. It will not surprise people, therefore, to read the following remarkable passage which took place in the Committee-room this morning. Let it be remembered that the conduct which elicited this indignant rebuke of the Chairman is but a specimen of the whole.

Q.—By Mr. SCHURZ—Do you remember a bargain made between the Department and C. K. GARRISON about 36,000 Enfield rifles? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Was not there the margin put up by C. K. GARRISON? A.—C. K. GARRISON put up that margin.

Q.—Did not afterward the bargain go back in consequence of the Government not delivering the guns? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Why was it? A.—Because the purchaser failed to take the guns; for that reason the bargain was not consummated.

Q.—By Mr. SAWYER—He did not fulfill his part of the contract? A.—He did not fulfill his part of the contract; the guns are in our possession today; we were willing to deliver them any time.

Q.—Did he ever make any complaint of the action of the Government on his part? A.—Never.

Q.—By Mr. SCHURZ—It appears by the correspondence that the margin was returned to GARRISON, so that it seems that contract was cancelled finally in consequence of the failure of the Government of the United States? A.—If you will look at my indorsement you will see the facts.

The Chairman to Mr. SCHURZ—When the witness testified that it was not so, why should you ask him a question assuming that it was so, and then telegraph to the reporter sitting back of you on the sofa to have it telegraphed all over the country?

Mr. SCHURZ—We are going over the whole case. What I mean to show is this, that here a contract was canceled.

The CHAIRMAN—No, Sir; you put in words that it was canceled by the Government, when the witness testifies that it was canceled by the other party by his refusing to receive the arms. I am only stating what the witness said. Then, when he had said this, you put a statement directly the opposite, and telegraphed to the reporter back of you, who, I suppose, is to send a garbled extract all over the country.

Mr. SCHURZ—This is not a garbled extract. I was about reading the correspondence, if, however, I cannot ask a question.

The CHAIRMAN—You may ask any question; but do not put in the witness' mouth things that he never said.

The WITNESS—My construction of it is that GARRISON failed to take the guns; failed to put up his money. We would gladly have accepted the money. He put up his margin but failed to complete the purchase.

Mr. AMES—And you do not deliver until you get the purchase money? A.—Never; that is the universal rule.

Mr. SCHURZ—Here is your own letter in reference to the return of a margin. Look at the date.

The WITNESS—The sale had failed and fallen through by the action of the purchaser in not putting up the money. He ought to have put it up, and the Government was left with these goods on its hands; he naturally makes complaint, and an effort to get his margin back again, he not then wanting the goods; that is the whole transaction as I understand it.

Q.—Do you not give the whole history of that transaction in this letter which you wrote to Washington? A.—I suppose so; I do not know exactly that I gave the history of it; I do not remember what I wrote there.

Q.—But we have in the testimony a series of letters concerning this whole case, which make it perfectly plain; for aught I know the Colonel is correct, but it merely occurred to me at this moment. [Mr. SCHURZ read the correspondepce on pages 104, 105, 106 and 107 of the testimony, being a portion of the correspondence on exhibit No. 3.]

The Chairman—General, does not that correspondence show that there was a failure in the part of the purchaser to pay the money?

Mr. SCHURZ—What I indicated was this, that there was also, in consequence of Winter snows and so on, as Major CRISPIN in his letter states, a failure on the part of the United States to deliver as quickly as Mr. GARRISON had asked for deliveries.

Mr. AMES—GARRISON in his letter says: "My case is one of serious hardship, and the Government will lose nothing by its action if it returns this margin to me."

The CHAIRMAN—The correspondence shows precisely what the witness testifies. You put words into the witness' mouth, General, assuming that he said the contract was canceled by the action of the Government, and not by the action of the party, and then turned to the reporter behind you and nodded. I have seen this every day.

Mr. SCHURZ—I do not think that was the purport of what I said. Certainly, it was canceled by the action of the Government, the party, of course, asking for it.

Mr. SAWYER—The Government allowed it to be canceled at his request.

The WITNESS—The thing fell through by the failure of the party to fulfill his portion of the contract by non-payment of the purchase money. Mr. SAWYER and GARRISON himself admits it.

THE NAVY DEPARTMENT.

Organization of the Committee on the Navy—The Accusers Called to Prove Their Charges.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—The Select Committee on the investigation into the charges against the Navy Department, met this morning and organized. After considerable discussion as to what direction they should look for the facts to sustain the allegations made, the Chairman was directed to notify the editors of the New-York Sun that they would be ready on Thursday morning of next week to hear what they had to say in support of the allegations, and to receive the names of witnesses who can furnish the facts. Many people here cannot but think it is going to the very verge of decency to ask for facts from such a source.

THE POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT.

Mr. Creswell Vindicated.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 14.—The Senate Committee on Post-offices and Post-roads, at their meeting today, considered the House bill which prohibits straw bidding in mail contracts, and agreed to favorably report the same with amendments. This is the result of the first investigation into any of the Departments which has been completed. In this case the Postmaster-General is not only vindicated, but the man who brought the charges have invoked legislation which destroys their opportunities for the future.

THE NEW-YORK CUSTOM-HOUSE.

Testimony of the Naval Officer—How Patronage is Distributed.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 14.—The New-York Custom-House Committee met this morning, when a letter was read from C. W. H. SCHULTZ reaffirming his testimony that KASMIRE said he came to his store to examine his books on account of information derived from a Custom-house official, &c. Other letters were laid before the Committee, including one from TREADWELL, to the effect that KASMIRE was ready to say that SCHULTZ was wrong in every particular.

The Committee decided that Messrs. KASMIRE and VAN ROALTE should communicate to the Committee by affidavit on that subject.

A. B. LAFLIN, Naval Officer of New-York, testified as to his duties, saying that he has under him sixty-nine clerks and three messengers. He was not aware any of them had received pay except under the provision of law.

On a cross-examination by Senator CASSERLY he further explained the connection of his office with that of the Collector, and the specific duties performed. He testified that some time ago he gave direction to Col. BURT to keep for his (LAFLIN'S) satisfaction a record of the errors discovered in the papers from the Custom-house which passed through his office; such errors might occur in the estimating of duties on certain styles of goods; some of these errors were in favor of and others against the Government, amounting in the aggregate to $1,000,000 within the period of eight months; the errors against the Government amounted to $300,000 or $400,000; this was in the examination of papers in the Entry and Liquidation Division; the mistakes arise more from arithmetical calculations than from errors of judgment; the Naval Office exercised a check and supervisory control over the Collector's Department.

The Committee took a recess from 12 to 1 o'clock.

On reassembling, Mr. CASSERLY resumed the cross-examination of Mr. LAFLIN, by saying he had been informed there had been corrections in other divisions. Witness could not furnish details of the corrections, and did not know what took place in the Collector's office as to the correction of errors; when an error was discovered by the Naval Office the corresponding clerk would call the attention of the corresponding clerk in the Collector's Office to the fact; this was done verbally; witness had represented to the Collector that there had been carelessness. He repeated that he was not aware that any of his clerks had received money for work performed out of office hours. Clerks were not compelled to take work home with them, and he would not, therefore, find fault with them if they confined themselves to regular hours.

On being cross-examined by Senator BAYARD, he said he received as money one-twelfth of the amounts collected for violation of the Revenue laws.

In reply to Senator PRATT, the witness said his clerks are appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury on the recommendation of the Naval Officer. He knew of no other reason for clerks performing work out of office hours than the desire to keep up the business at their desks.

Senator BAYARD asked witness whether patronage had been used as an instrument for controlling the Republican State Convention, when he replied: It had not in his office; he was a delegate to the Convention of 1870, but not to that of 1871; he attended the latter, but did not notice a larger number of Custom-house officers present than in previous years; they were not there to an unusual number, though he did not make a numerical count; no man from his office went to the Convention at his suggestion or with his approval; it did not occur to him that a single one was there; for himself, he went there to take part; he was also at Albany on the organization of the Legislature, and his business there was in connection with that subject; he had no knowledge that patronage of the Custom house was used to control the primary elections; about twenty-three changes had taken place in his office since he took charge of it, either by resignations or removal; the principal men, with the exception of the deputy he appointed two or three weeks ago, are the same as they were then; he was willing his appointments should be scrutinized according to the strict rule of civil service reform; the men in his office, he hoped, lived up to their professions of Republicanism.

On cross-examination by Senator HOWE, he said, when at the State Convention of 1870, he supported HORACE GREELEY for Governor; so far as he knew, the Custom-house officers then there did the same; he had neither made nor promised to make any appointments as a reward for political service rendered at the last State Convention; he removed three of his clerks for violation of law, and others because their habits were bad.

Other gentlemen of the Committee interrogated the witness.

In reply to a question by Senator HOWE, he said Senator CONKLING had never intimated a desire that he should remove or appoint a single person to office in his department.

Senator CASSERLY referred to the fact that Mr. LAFLIN had testified he had in his office as deputy Col. BURT, who was once on the staff of Gov. FENTON, and he (CASSERLY) desired to say that BURT was now a Fenton man? The witness responded in the affirmative. He was further asked if there were others in his office of the same political preference. Not having canvassed the matter, he could not speak positively. In answer to the question whether there were not divisions in the Republican Party, witness replied that the members of that party were not always agreed in political attachments, and in response to an interrogatory as to whether there was not a great feud between the friends of Mr. CONKLING and Mr. FENTON, he replied that he would not swear there was a feud, although there were differences. The efficiency of the clerks in his office was of a high order, and he believed the clerks in the Collector's office were entitled to the same compliment. On the question of moieties witness said that during the time he had been in office, he thought a year next month, his share was $150, and during the same time paid the Collector and Surveyor, and the informer got as much as all three together.

Senator HOWE also interrogated the witness regarding political influences, during which examination he said a large majority of the last Republican State Convention were in favor of the view as entertained by the Custom-house officers, but the day after a change took place—the majority being reduced. In reply to Senator CASSERLY, witness said he believed money was used by the Tammany Republicans' Committee. The Committee then adjourned till to-morrow morning.

ALBANY INVESTIGATIONS.

Judiciary Investigation.

ALBANY, March 14.—The Judiciary Committee met today at 4 o'clock to hear argument in respect to the Police and Civil Justice bills. Hon. C. S. SPENCER argued in opposition to the bills on constitutional grounds. C. F. FITCH replied. Judges WELSH, SHANDLEY, HOGAN, QUINN and KANE also addressed the Committee. The Committee agreed to hear further argument on behalf of Police Justices at the Fifth-avenue Hotel, New-York, on Tuesday, 19th inst., at 6 P. M.

Printing Investigating Committee.

ALBANY, March 14.—The Printing Investigation Committee had another session this afternoon. WM. RICHARDSON took the stand and testified that the evidence given by THOS. GOODWIN at a former session concerning him, and to the effect that he received a percentage from HARRY E. PEASE, was untrue; that no person ever, under any circumstances, paid him a cent as percentage for legislative diagram work or printing of any discription, or anything else. He also said at the close of his service the Assembly voted him $300 extra compensation, which he refused to take, and had not taken up to this time.

MAYOR HALL'S TRIAL.

What District-Attorney Sullivan and Mr. Smith Say—The Latest Rumors.

In an interview with Assistant District-Attorney SULLIVAN, he sketched out the action of the Court, today, as follows:

After the opening the jury will be called and the official announcement of the death of Mr. CLARK, the juror, will be made. The Court will then ask counsel on both sides what course they propose to pursue. Two courses will be open to them. The law permits the selection of a new juror, if counsel on both sides agree. If there be such an agreement the evidence so far taken will be read over to the person selected, and the trial proceeded with. If both sides do not agree to this course the jury will be dismissed and the trial set down on the calendar in the ordinary way.

Ex-Recorder SMITH, counsel for Mayor HALL, said that counsel for the defense had not yet had a consultation. He stated that the trial, according to the ruling in the Cancemi murder case, could not go on with eleven jurors. Counsel would certainly not consent, in his opinion, to the supplying of the place made vacant by the death of Mr. CLARK. They could only regard the matter in its present aspect as a mistrial, and would not agree to anything but the dismissal of the present jury. Mr. SMITH said he believed their side had lost much by the death of Mr. CLARK. It was rumored, yesterday, that a motion to remove the case into the Court of Oyer and Terminer would now be made, and a Supreme Court Judge from the interior of the State asked to hear it. It was also rumored that Judge DALY is anxious to resign his seat in favor of some other Judge, being worried with the already lengthy proceedings.

Democratic Reform.

The Twenty-first District Democratic Reform Association met last night at East Side Hall, Eighty-sixth-street and Third-avenue, and elected the following officers: Henry Clausen, Jr., President; Stephen Van Nostrand and Elisha Kingsland, Vice-Presidents; James M. Sheehan and George W. Thompson, Secretaries; Myer Stern, Treasurer; John Cuff, Sergeant at Arms.

AMUSEMENTS.

Dramatic.

BOOTH'S THEATRE — THE LAST CHANGES IN "JULIUS CÆSAR."

The present is the last week of "Julius Cæsar" at Booth's Theatre, and the concluding representations have been signalized by a fresh change in the cast. Mr. EDWIN BOOTH now acts Mark Antony, Mr. CRESWICK, Cassius, and Mr. BANGS, Brutus. All three parts have, therefore, now been acted by Mr. BOOTH, and theatre-goers have had full opportunity to contrast his merits in each. Of the three representations, his Cassius is decidedly the best, and his Brutus as emphatically the worst. But, although his Mark Antony must thus be placed between the two, it comes much nearer to the excellence of his Cassius than to the inferiority of his Brutus. In Mark Antony, the finest and the least admirable characteristics of Mr. BOOTH'S style are forcibly shown. His fiery intensity, his keen perception of climax, his rhythmic ear, his close and anxious appreciation of the text, are conspicuous in the part; and so are his inelegant carriage, his angular gesticulation, his monotonous play of feature, and his sub-acid manner, which, while appropriate in some of his parts, is certainly not so in all of them.

Why is it that Mr. BOOTH cannot hold up his head and walk erectly? It is provoking that a performance in many points so striking, and so really intellectual as his Mark Antony, should be marred throughout by this tiresome blemish. Mr. BOOTH seems constantly to have in his mind the idea of a tiger about to spring, and, consciously or not, to imitate the action in his own person. That eternal crouch, with the shoulders constantly depressed forward, is so totally out of character in the dashing, alert Mark Antony—the worshiper of beauty, the runner of races, the reckless reveler o'nights—that it gives the throughout a feeling of incongruity, the more provoking since it so obviously admits of an easy remedy. The mannerism may be well enough in Richard—the habit has, perhaps, in a measure, been contracted by the actor in playing the humpbacked tyrant so much—or in Sir Giles, or in other parts wherein a stoop of the figure may be regarded as a natural fruit of age; but it is distinctly inappropriate and unpleasing in Mark Antony. We do not object to such a show of sycophancy as the text calls for in the presence of Cæsar. We are willing to recollect that Mark Antony is a supple courtier as well as a ruffling soldier. He may here well "crook the pregnant hinges of the knee," or neck, as the instinct of the artist may suggest, for the intent is that "thrift may follow fawning." But, even so, Mark Antony would bear himself like a warrior, a Roman warrior at that, and not like a consumptive artisan.

Mark Antony has practically but one act—the third. In the preceding acts, like Mercutio, he is overshadowed by his companions; but in that one, also, like Mercutio, he completely overtops, or rather puts them entirely out of sight. To prevent his absorbing the interest, SHAKESPEARE kills Mercutio off at the climax of his glory; and, for the same reason, Mark Antony is practically shelved at the same dramatic epoch. The actor's sole, but splendid, opportunities are in the two scenes in the capitol and the forum; and, setting aside the faults we have noted, very splendidly does Mr. BOOTH avail himself of them. The vocal skill with which he manages his various speeches, winding up in the magnificent inflammatory outbursts to the mob until he cries,

"Mischief, thou art afoot, Take thou what course thou will!"

we have hardly ever heard surpassed for fervid and effective declamation. On the night we were able to see the tragedy, Mr. BOOTH was twice, and deservedly, called before the curtain after this effort, and enthusiastically applauded by the audience. His superiority in these scenes to Mr. BANGS—whose worthy and well-approved impersonation we would by no means depreciate—lies in the adroiter use of climax. On physical differences we need not dwell; here one actor has the advantage and there the other. But Mr. BOOTH'S clearer discernment and riper practice teaches him to hold himself in check, to keep something in reserve, to restrain the torrent and whirlwind of his passion for the electric display at the last. Mr. BANGS, with honest vigor of purpose but inferior art, reaches his ultimatum almost at once. Hence he has nothing further to show us in the sequel, and hence that sequel ranges into something like anti-climax. These are matters well worth the close study of young actors, and it is not often that an opportunity offers for so valuable a comparative illustration.

Mr. CRESWICK, always an intelligent performer, and one of the class whose efforts deserve respectful examination, strikes us as somewhat heavy and lethargic in Cassius. Nor does he fill the bodily ideal in being "lean and hungry" looking any more than Mr. J. B. BOOTH did—a point again where Mr. EDWIN BOOTH had decided advantage. Mr. CRESWICK reads Brutus with the discretion and studious care of an experienced artist, who has a just sense of the responsibility of his vocation, and who has long faithfully labored in it. But, although he strikes exceptional fire in the tent scene, Mr. CRESWICK'S Cassius, as a whole, lacks inspiration and magnetism. His "business" on the other hand is clever and, we believe, in part quite original, his walk and action are dignified, if not always graceful, and his elocution generally unexceptionable. Mr. BANGS looks Brutus better than either of his predecessors in the part, but he preaches sadly in it, his palpable anxiety to suggest a strong contrast with his Mark Antony having doubtless betrayed him into the error. Deliberation is not necessarily conveyed by an over-measured delivery, and this Mr. BANGS, with the best intentions, carries to the verge of the wearisome. He nevertheless looks every inch a Roman, and throws into some passages of the text an assumption of deep feeling that can usually be justified, and is always impressive.

In taking leave, in the way of extended comment, of the production of "Julius Cæsar" at this theatre, we once more record our gratitude to the management for a very noble Shakespearean revival. The tragedy has had long acceptance at Booth's at the hands of the public, but not longer, certainly, than it merited. This is said without forgetting the fact that there has been no really first-rate Brutus here, and that sometimes Cassius has been inefficiently played. But Mr. BOOTH'S failure in Brutus may readily be overlooked in his capital impersonation of Cassius, and his superb, if unequal, representation of Mark Antony; and, let him act what he may, he deserves hearty and ample acknowledgments for this, the last of the liberal and tasteful revivals which have been an honor alike to himself and to the American stage.

Musical.

ITALIAN OPERA.

"Lucia di Lammermoor" is to be recited at the Academy this evening, with Miss NILSSON, Signor BRIGNOLI and M. BARRE in the leading rôles. At the matinée on Saturday, "Mignon" will be done. Monday next, "Faust" is to be the opera.

MATINEES AT STEINWAY'S.

Matinée concerts were given at Steinway's on Wednesday and yesterday. The two entertainments were extremely successful, Thursday's affair attracting the largest assemblage and affording most pleasure. Miss MEHLIG'S performance on Wednesday could hardly appeal to the general public with as much eloquence as the recital supplied by Messrs. SARASATE and MILLS. It addressed itself especially to the lovers of the highest order of piano-music, while the programme interpreted on the morrow was as comprehensive as Miss MEHLIG'S was monotonous. The lady's taste, too, is rather severe, and even the portion of the audience best fitted to appreciate her thoughtfulness of delivery and thorough technique would, we are sure, have greeted with pleasure a few lighter selections. Miss MEHLIG played in turn WEBER'S sonata in A flat, MOZART'S "Andantino" in A minor, some studies by CHOPIN; MENDELSSOHN'S "Variations Sérieuses," several fantasias by SCHUMANN and TAUSIG'S arrangement of WEBER'S "Invitation to the Dance." It is superfluous to say that all these pieces were executed with rare intelligence and unimpeachable correctness, and that the talent of the artist had as frequent evidence of recognition as her warmest friends could desire. The Mills-Sarasate matinée, which, by the way, closed the series, enlisted the labors of several well-known performers, as well as those of the two projectors. Mr. GEORGE SIMPSON sang very well BEETHOVEN'S "Adelaide." Miss CLEMENTINE LASAR contributed two songs by FRANZ, Miss STERLING was heard in three compositions written, respectively, by SCHUMANN, SCHUBERT and LISZT, and decidedly gloomy if neither grand nor peculiar, and Mr. A. H. PEASE aided Mr. MILLS in the former gentleman's effective duet for two pianos on motives from "Faust." Mr. BERGNER also took part in a duo for piano and violoncello. The solos for violin and piano included Señor SARASATE'S fantasia on airs from "Martha," WIENAWSKI'S "Russian Airs;" a "Valse Poem," very neatly written for Mr. MILLS, by Mr. F. BRANDEIS; an impromptu by CHOPIN, and Mr. MILLS' own "Recollections of Home." The usual number of encores was bestowed during the progress of the concert.

PERSONAL.

Mr. GEORGE DOLBY sailed for Europe, by the Cunard steam-ship, on Wednesday....We are sorry to learn that Mr. J. GRAU has been suffering from a severe illness. He is now, however, convalescent. At last accounts, Mr. GRAU was in Vienna....Mr. MAURICE GRAU departed, yesterday, for California, where a series of representations of opera bouffe, with Mlle. AIMEE as the chief performer, seems to be imminent.

ATTACK ON THE QUEEN.

The Sovereign Threatened by a Supposed Fenian—Prompt Measures Against the Offender.

From the London Times, March 1.

Yesterday afternoon an incident occurred, as the Queen was about to alight from her carriage at Buckingham Palace, on returning from a drive, calculated to inspire alarm and indignation, but which happily proved harmless. The Royal cortége had returned by way of Constitution-hill, and had entered the Palace about 5½ o'clock, by the north gate, passing thence through what is called the Garden Gate into the inner court-yard. A large crowd, whom the Police were engaged in keeping back, had collected in front of the Palace to see the Queen, and cheered her as she entered. Her Majesty was attended by Lady CHURCHILL, and had the usual escort, Major-Gen. Hon. A. HARDINGE and Lord CHARLES FITZROY being the Equerries. As the Queen was preparing to alight a lad suddenly presented himself at the side of the carriage, holding a paper in one hand and a pistol in the other. He tried at first, it is said, to attract the attention of Lady CHURCHILL, mistaking her, probably, for the Queen, by whose side she sat, and then appeared to be about to address himself to Her Majesty, going round the back of the carriage, when the Equerries and the Queen's personal attendant, John BROWN, followed him and gave him into the custody of the police-sergeant on duty at the time. The Queen showed no sign whatever of fear. The lad was immediately disarmed of the pistol, which proved to be unloaded. It is an old-fashioned weapon, with a flint and steel lock, which was broken, and in the barrel a piece of greasy red rag was found. He had also a knife in his possession and the paper to which reference has been made, which on examination was found to be a petition, written on parchment, for the release of the Fenian prisoners. He was taken forthwith to the King-street Police Station, Westminster, where he gave the name Arthur O'CONNOR, and stated his age to be seventeen, adding that he was a clerk to Messrs. LIVETT & FRANKS, oil and color manufacturers, No. 72 Blackman-street, Borough, and that he resided with his father and mother at No. 4 Church-row, Houndsditch. He is in appearance rather tall for his age, and slender. He wore black tell-tales, and was ordinarily well dressed in other respects for a person in his condition of life. He had managed to scale some iron railings, about ten feet high, at the point where the garden-wall abuts at a corner upon the Palace upon its northern side, and had passed through the garden-gate into the courtyard unperceived, and, therefore, unchallenged. The theory of the Police is that he contrived to accomplish this feat at the moment they and the porter were engaged in keeping the entrance clear for the return of Her Majesty. He has stated since his apprehension that he bought the pistol at a shop in the Borough, and that he is a grandson of the late Mr. FERGUS O'CONNOR. He was seen last evening by Dr. BOND, the medical officer connected with the Police Station, and will probably be brought before a Magistrate for examination this morning, at the Bow-street Police Court. Last evening the pistol found upon the prisoner was, at the request of Mr. GLADSTONE, taken to the House of Commons, there to enable him to answer anxious inquiries as to whether it was really unloaded when the prisoner was apprehended, and in the course of the evening seven members of Parliament called at the Station for the purpose of seeing the prisoner, but their request was very properly not complied with, he himself, moreover, showing much aversion from being seen in his cell by any one but the attendants.

THE PETITION.

The petition found upon the person of the prisoner ran thus:

"I, VICTORIA, Queen by the Grace of God, do make the following declaration: Whereas, there are at the present moment confined in various prisons throughout the United Kingdom a number of men, Irish by birth, who are known and celebrated as the 'Fenian prisoners;' and whereas, the said prisoners have been in prison and kept in durance by order of my Government, and with my sanction, for the crime of high treason, the said Fenians having rebelled and conspired against my crown, endeavoring by various unlawful means to weaken and destroy my power and authority over the Irish Nation; and whereas, it is a well-known fact that the sympathisers of the Fenian prisoners and the Nation have at various times humbly petitioned for their pardon and release—notwithstanding which they are still injured as aforesaid. Now I, the said VICTORIA, Queen of Great Britain, Ireland and the Colonies, do hereby, with the consent of my Parliament, grant to the person and every one of the said men detained and celebrated as the Fenian prisoners, who are now suffering imprisonment for the crime of treason against my Crown. And I, the said Queen of Great Britain, Ireland, and the Colonies, do solemnly pledge my royal word, and swear to keep and see carried out the following five clauses: Clause 1—That all the men known and celebrated as the said Fenian prisoners shall be restored to liberty without any delay whatever. Clause 2—That all the said Fenians shall be allowed free and entire liberty for the remainder of their lives. Clause 3—That for the remainder of their lives the said Fenians so shall be as free from the Police supervision and restraint with the rest of my subjects. Clause 4—That the said Fenians shall be allowed to return to their native country, or any other country, town, or place which they may choose to visit, without any interference whatever from any Government. Clause 5—That, notwithstanding the fact of my agreeing to the above conditions only through fear of my life, I will not attempt to depart from any of them on that account, nor upon any other reason, cause or pretext whatever will I depart or attempt to depart from any of them; neither will I listen to any advice which my Ministers may wish to give toward causing me to depart from my word, or toward the violation of anything above stated, but shall adhere strictly to everything. So help me God.

Signed this 27th day of February, in the Year of Grace 1872.

Witnessed by ——.

Whereas, A person named ARTHUR O'CONNOR, residing at No. 4 Church-row, Houndsditch, in the City of London, having committed an outrage against my Royal person, has surrendered himself into my hands, he, the said ARTHUR O'CONNOR, being perfectly willing to suffer for such offense—Now I, the said VICTORIA, Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, do solemnly pledge my royal word to the effect that if the said ARTHUR O'CONNOR be found guilty of death by my judges, after a just and fair trial, he the said ARTHUR O'CONNOR shall not be strangled like a common felon, but shall receive that death which is due to him as a Christian, a Republican, and as one who has never harmed a human being—that is to say, he shall be shot, and after death his body shall be delivered to his friends to be buried wheresoever they may choose.

Signed this 27th day of February in the year of grace 18/2, by me.

BROOKLYN NEWS.

Suicide of a German Youth.

HENRY SCHAFER, a German lad aged sixteen, residing at No. 319 Middle-street, shot himself through the heart early yesterday morning in Barton-street, between Ninth and Tenth avenues. A letter bidding farewell to his friends was found in his pocket. The unhappy youth had been employed in the piano factory of LANGE & CO., in East Twenty-second-street, New-York, and disappeared on Monday last with $140, the proceeds of a check which he had been sent to the bank to have cashed, and it is supposed that the remorse resulting from the crime impelled him to suicide.

Brief Items.

The argument in the matter of the petition of WILLIAM COIT, to have set aside and vacated the Clinton-street regrading and paving assessments, was begun yesterday in the Supreme Court, Special Term, before Judge GILBERT.

Collector FREELAND yesterday afternoon seized the vinegar factory of D. F. WRIGHT, Nos. 135, 136 and 137 Furman-street, on the complaint of assessor JOURDAN, who charged that the establishment was used for the illicit distillation of spirits.

JOHN HUBBEL, a German, who was arrested in East New-York on Tuesday, charged with having poisoned four children named TIBNER, was yesterday released from custody, the Coroner's investigation having demonstrated that the accusation was groundless.

EDWARD WALSH, a young lad, was tried before Judge MOORE, in the Court of Sessions, yesterday, charged with having assisted two companions named KELLY in robbing their aunt, Mrs. CALLAGAN, of Navy-street, of $1,500 in gold and silver coin. WALSH was found guilty and was remanded for sentence.

PUBLIC OPINION ON PUBLIC AFFAIRS

The Candidate for the Presidency.

From the New-Bedford (Mass.) Mercury.

Mr. GREELEY says in Saturday's Tribune: "We may count the main charges of Senator SUMNER'S resolution concerning sales of arms to the French as now fully established." Mr. GREELEY may so count, but no fair-minded man will. Mr. GREELEY is unreliable. He was for letting the "wayward sisters go in peace," in 1861; he then changed his mind, and with his clamor of "On to Richmond," attempted to conduct a campaign; and then, the wind again changing, he sought to negotiate a peace at Niagara with the rebels. Since THEODORE TILTON invented him as a Presidential candidate, Mr. GREELEY has had a bee in his bonnet.

INFLUENCE OF THE TRIBUNE.

Dayton (Ohio) Journal.

The Tribune may see in the result of the local elections in its own State, where its influence is the greatest, convincing proof that the people are not misled by its sophistries or its demagogism. The Republicans will not consent to be transferred to the ranks of the faction organized by SUMNER, SCHURZ & Co., and to which the Tribune has been laboring to give consequence and power.

HARI-KARI.

National Standard, Salem, N. Y.

The Tribune has destroyed itself with the honest masses—those who are now the President's warmest supporters—and the crack of its whip over the heads of those who will not shoulder its personal animosities and take ground against GRANT, excites only derision. The effect of the Tribune's course upon the elections already held affords another proof that its grumblings have little weight with honest Republicans. The local elections already held have been wholly uninfluenced by it, and Mr. GREELEY is left to calculate the effect of his course upon other elections. He can estimate the value of his refusal to sign the call for the Republican National Convention; to kick out of the party traces; his advice to the Republicans to disregard the action of their party conventions, whether local or national; his secret advice to Democrats as to how they might carry the next Presidential election, and the effect of his virulent and industrious efforts to defeat the party of the country.

A GOOD DEMOCRATIC "ORGAN."

Louisville Commercial.

We heard a prominent Democrat say that he, and one hundred other Democrats, had given in their subscriptions for the Tribune, giving as the reason for the same, that it was doing more for the Democratic Party than both of the Democratic papers of this city.

THE REASON WHY.

Detroit Post.

The New-York Tribune says that "of all the petty and utterly contemptible resolutions of inquiry ever introduced in Congress, none has ever gone so very low down as Senator CONKLING'S resolution." It is plain enough why the Tribune objects to this investigation. The Tribune has been saying, continually, for the last six months, that Senator CONKLING has control of the offices in New-York, that Senator FENTON and his friends are ostracized by President GRANT, and whining in that fashion incessantly. Now, Senator CONKLING'S resolution calls for the documents which will, he thinks, convict the Tribune of systematic and continual falsehood, by proving that Senator FENTON has not been ostracized, and that Senator CONKLING does not control the offices; but that Senator FENTON is the real office beggar of that State. The Tribune naturally objects. It considers it highly proper to investigate the President's doings, and the doings of all the Grant office-holders; but when it comes to investigating the men on its side it is angry in a moment.

WHAT THE NEW-HAMPSHIRE ELECTION MEANS.

Trenton State Gazette.

The chief significance of the decided Republican victory in New-Hampshire is the utter failure of the Sorehead Movement and the certain renomination and re-election of President GRANT. The result shows that the desperate and unjust efforts of a few Sorehead Republican journals and leaders to injure President GRANT and his Administration by all sorts of scandalous charges is indignantly rebuked by the patriotic sense of the people.

CONNECTICUT AND NEW-HAMPSHIRE.

Bridgeport (Conn.) Daily Standard.

We are particularly pleased with the result of the election in New-Hampshire, since it has agreeably disappointed our expectations, and we recommend the result to the careful consideration of Messrs. SCHURZ, SUMNER and GREELEY. Four years ago we went into the Presidential campaign with "New-Hampshire" for one of our battle-cries. We have it again today, and it bodes the same success. Let Connecticut emulate the good example.

MAYOR HALL AND THE NEW-YORK TIMES.

Springfield (Ill.) Daily State Journal.

Mayor HALL, who is as present on trial, some time since affected to see his way through to a final acquittal of the charges of fraud preferred against him, announced his intention to institute proceedings for damages in libel against the NEW-YORK TIMES, the source whence his Honor credits with all his trouble. That Journal has broken the Tammany Ring into fragments, opened up the reeking cesspools of corruption, and conferred inestimable benefits on the tax-payers of the Metropolis. In view of the good it has accomplished, Mayor HALL would not readily find twelve intelligent men who would be willing to award him any considerable damages in a suit for libel. If he is an innocent man—which his trial has not yet proven—he certainly kept bad company.

FALL IN THE NEW-YORK TRIBUNE.

Poughkeepsie Daily Eagle.

We consider it but fair to notice, while the excitements of the day are passing, how rapidly the New-York Tribune has gone down in influence—in this part of the country, at least—since HORACE GREELEY has clearly shown his factious and unjustifiable hostility to Gen. GRANT. For a time, as he began to develop himself, the people expressed much anxiety as to what he might be aiming at, and what he might accomplish. But now, as his aims are understood, nobody cares for the Tribune. It has sunk into insignificance.

THE GALLANT SCHURZ—HEART "NEVER QUAILS," &c.

St. Louis Democrat.

It has taken us precisely as long to "wheel about" in our estimate of Mr. SCHURZ as it has taken Mr. SCHURZ to "wheel about" in his political affiliations. He has betrayed his party, and proved false to his pledges; but although he allows the Democrats to make good use of him now, and expects his future rewards from them, we have no doubt he will discover that the traitor is not as highly prized as the treason.

QUITE AS GOOD AS WEBSTER.

Chicago Evening Post.

Senator SCHURZ ought to use more quotation-marks in his oratory. Yesterday, for instance, he remarked for the benefit of the mercurial people in the galleries:

"The Senator from Wisconsin cannot frighten me by saying, 'Our country, right or wrong.' In a certain sense I say so too. My country is the United States, and I say, 'My country, right or wrong; if right, to be kept right; if wrong, to be set right.'" [Applause in galleries.]

This is very good, indeed. It has been good for years. It was good when the degenerate WEBSTER offered at table the toast now repeated by the Senator from Wisconsin, and the progressive HALE, at the other end of the table, retorted in the language now adopted as original by the eminent gentleman from Pillow.

BIRDS OF A FEATHER, &c.

St. Louis Democrat.

Under the head of "Drift of Political Discussion"—being a pretended exhibit of popular thought as reflected in the newspapers—the New-York Tribune publishes extracts from the newspapers of the large cities. In the course of two columns we fail to recognize a single quotation from a Republican newspaper. If the Tribune hasn't changed its politics, why does it select the Boston Post, the Louisville Courier, the Cincinnati Enquirer, and the Missouri Republican as the exponents of political opinion? No wonder the stockholders of the Tribune raised GREELEY'S salary recently. The wonder is that he consents to go back on himself so vigorously even for $15,000 a year. In the olden days of Whiggery, when the coon was his emblem, he could be valiant on $5,000 a year or less. We are astonished to find him sell his conscience to the 'possum even for three times that sum per annum.

Medico-Legal Society.

The Medico-Legal Society met last evening. The draft of a "bill to provide for the care of alleged criminal deaf and dumb persons" was read and approved. Dr. RAY, of Philadelphia, read a paper on the evidence of medical experts. Having reviewed the laws of evidence applicable to medical testimony, and shewed the many injustices to which skilled experts were subjected, he pointed out the various remedies suggested for their removal, and urged the Society to take action in the matter.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

As expected business was active at the Exchange yesterday, March 14, the attendance being large, and the sales effected more numerous than usual. The following is a review of the proceedings, in which each of the auctions of the day is referred to, but, as in several instances, a fine doubt exists as to whether the sale reported is of a bona-fide character, only such transactions are noted in the summary below as are known to be genuine:

MULLER, WILKINS & CO., at public auction, sold the four-story brown-stone house and lot, known as No. 360 West Fifty-seventh-street, south side, forty feet east of Ninth-avenue, for $29,000, the purchaser being F. A. BOCHMANN. Also, by order of the Supreme Court, under the direction of M. J. WALDHEIMER, Esq., referee, two full lots on the north side of Fifty-seventh-street, between Ninth and Tenth avenues, for $6,200 each, and two lots on the south side of Fifty-eighth-street, adjoining the above, in the rear, for $3,600 each, the purchaser of the first-named being A. R. ENO, and of the second, M. H. REGENSBURGH. The same firm also sold by order of the executor of JAMES THOMPSON, deceased, the following lots, at the prices noted: Three lots on the west side of First-avenue, 25 feet 2 inches north of One Hundred and Fifth-street; purchased by L. J. PHILLIPS for $6,200, (for the three.) One lot north side of One Hundred and Fifth street, 100 feet west of First-avenue; purchased by J. J. FLYNN for $1,775. Three lots on One Hundred and Fifth-street, adjoining; purchased by Mr. PHILLIPS for $1,600 each, and two lots adjoining, bought by JOHN JENNING for $1,700 each. Another lot belonging to the same estate, on the north-west corner of First-avenue and One Hundred and Fifth street, although bid off for $3,150, was probably not sold. In addition, by order of the executors of SAMUEL LEGGITT, deceased, Messrs. MULLER & CO. also sold five lots, with back buildings upon the same, situate on the south side of East Twenty-fourth-street, 100½ feet east of First-avenue, for $6,500 each; purchaser, C. J. WALSH. For the following described property, owned by the same estate and located in the immediate vicinity bids as follows were received, but, as we are informed, probably without result. For two lots on the south-east corner of First-avenue and Twenty-fourth-street, with two-story store on same, $9,350 per lot bid. For three lots adjoining on First-avenue, $7,700 each bid, for one lot adjoining, with stable on same, $6,100 bid. For three lots on south side of Twenty fourth-street, 81.6 feet east of First-avenue, with four-story stone factory building on same, $7,000 per lot bid, and for three lots on Twenty-third-street, adjoining above in the rear with portion of same building upon same, $8,000 per lot bid. Other auctions, in charge of the same auctioneers, resulted as follows: For three-story and attic brick house and lot, No. 23 East Fourth-street, north side, between Lafayette-place and the Bowery, $22,300 bid, but probably not sold. For premises Nos. 29, 30 and 32 Greene-street, east side, between Canal and Grand streets, with brick houses on same, $32,500 bid, but no sale effected, and for four lots on the north-west corner of First-avenue and Eighty-fourth-street, $6,500 per lot, but without result.

E. H. LUDLOW & CO., by order of the executor of FRANCIS HENDRICKS, deceased, disposed of the premises known as No. 19 East Twelfth-street, north side, between University-place and Fifth-avenue, embracing a two-story, attic and basement high-stoop brick house, 25 by 48.6, with extra-size lot, 25 by about 152; sold to J. NATHAN for $23,000, and considered a bargain. The same firm also offered at public auction the brown-stone dwelling of the late Mrs. Gen. WOOL, No. 147 West Thirty-fourth-street, north side, between Ninth and Tenth avenues, but bids to the amount of only $13,600 being received, the property was withdrawn.

S. DINGEE, by order of the Supreme Court, in partition, under the direction of ROBERT COCHRANE, Esq., referee, resold the four-story brown-stone house and lot known as No. 33 St. Mark's place, for $18,100; purchaser, HENRY WEILER. This same property was sold at the Exchange Nov. 2, and purchased by the same buyer above named, at that auction, for $21,100; but some questions having since come up, owing to the fact that the house abuts a few inches on the adjoining lot, a resale was had yesterday, with the result noted.

ALLEN & BROWN, at public auction, disposed of the three-story high-stoop brick house and lot known as No. 7 Varick-place or Sullivan-street, between Houston and Bleecker streets, for $13,200, the purchaser being JOHN SCHLAMM. The same firm also offered at auction one lot on the east side of Tenth-avenue, 75 feet 8 inches south of Sixty-fourth-street, and four lots in the rear, on the south side of Sixty-fourth-street, but without effecting a sale, although bids to the amount of $5,500 were received for the avenue lot.

D. M. SEAMAN, by order of the Supreme Court in foreclosure, under the direction of BENJAMIN F. TODD, Esq., referee, sold a two-story and attic brick house and lot, located on the east side of Market-street, between Madison and Henry streets, for $10,000, purchaser Mrs. MARY CONNELLY. Also, by order of the same Court, D. P. IRELAND, Jr., Esq., referee, sold the following property: Plot of ground on the north-east corner of Hudson and Thomas streets, 53 by 52.7 by 69.9 by 27.9; one lot, 25 by 75, on the north side of Warren-street, 50 feet north of College-place; three lots, each 25 by 75, known as No. 26 College-place and Nos. 66 and 68 Warren-street; four lots on the south-west corner of Chambers-street and College-place, each 25 by 50; one lot, 25 by 100; known as No. 26 College-place; one lot, 25 by 100, on the north side of Warren-street; one lot, 25 by 100, known as No. 12 Worth-street, south side, between Hudson-street and West Broadway, and one lot, 25 by 100, known as No. 46 Thomas-street. This sale was merely made for the purpose of perfecting title, and at the nominal bid of $300 the entire lot was struck off to WM. H. VANDERBILT.

The closing sales of the day were made by JAMES M. MILLER, who, by order of trustees, sold the lease of two lots, with the four-story and basement building thereon, known as Nos. 527 and 529 West Twenty-second-street, north side, between Tenth and Eleventh avenues; lots, together in size, 50 by 98.9; building, 50 by 80. The lease has twenty-one years to run from May 1, with covenant of renewal for a similar term; ground rent, $500 per annum; sold for $17,350; purchaser, THOMAS CUNNINGHAM. Mr. MILLER also sold valuable property located respectively, at Orange and East Orange, N. J., full details in regard to which, with prices realized, will be found below. He also offered at auction the hotel property known as the Jarrard Hotel, located at New-Brunswick, N. J., embracing a large plot of ground, containing about four city lots, with a two-and-a-half story frame hotel, a stable and other buildings thereon, situate on the corner of Burnet-street and Commercial-avenue. For the property bids, amounting to $9,150, were made, but not accepted, as we are informed, by those interested in the disposition of the realty.

In reference to the sale of Capt. BOUNTY's lots at Long Island City, Astoria, conducted yesterday by JERE. JOHNSON, Jr., auctioneer, particulars will be given to-morrow.

Today, at the Exchange, at a Sheriff's sale, WM. KENNELLY will dispose of the six-story brick house and lot on the north-west corner of Delancey and Norfolk streets, and at a Supreme Court sale in foreclosure, the same auctioneer, it is advertised, will also sell two building lots on Eleventh-avenue, between Ninety-sixth and Ninety-seventh streets.

At private sale, WM. TUCKER, No. 220 Fifth-avenue, reports having recently sold a house and lot (20x80x0.60) on the north side of East Fifty-seventh-street, 80 feet west of Lexington-avenue, for $20,500. Purchaser, Mr. FELLOWES DAVIS.

BROOKLYN REFORM.

Mass-Meeting at the Academy of Music Last Night.

Report of the Citizens Reform Committee of Seventy-Five.

Eleven Thousand Fraudulent Votes Counted in Last November Election—Report of the Legislative Committee—Addresses by Messrs. Demas Barnes, Lowe, Woodford, McLain and Others.

At the Brooklyn Academy of Music was assembled last evening, the respectable portion of the citizens of Brooklyn, to take part in a mass-meeting at which was presented the reports of the various committees appointed at and after the meeting of Nov. 30, 1871, for the purpose of investigating the frauds perpetrated at the Fall election, and bringing the offenders to justice. The stage, at the opening of the Academy, presented a forest scene, occupying its full extent, and the members of the Committee walked about as if really rambling among the trees. At 8 o'clock, however, the meeting began to organize, and the scene was changed to the inside of a drawing-room, the Committee taking their seats on chairs and sofas set apart for the purpose. FRANKLIN WOODRUFF was presiding officer, and the following gentlemen were among those upon the stage: Demas Barnes, W. A. Coit, S. B. Dutcher, J. W. Stoops, Gen. Woodford, F. Woodruff, R. M. Whiting, Jr., J. T. Henry, H. E. Bowen, J. W. Grogan, S. Booth, E. J. Whitlock, M. Reynolds, A. J. Davis, S. Parkinson, H. Farrington, R. H. Johnston, Thomas Kinsella, A. J. Dailey, Winchester Britton, Julian Allen, Samuel McLean, H. B. Claflin, A. A. Low, W. W. Goodrich, George Kinkel, J. F. Hunter and others.

Mr. WOODRUFF, in opening the meeting, made a brief address, during which he said the Committee selected by the citizens to investigate the frauds had, by the aid of their subcommittees, discovered that over 10,000 illegal votes had been polled in November last; that many of the offenders had been brought to justice, some convicted and punished, and many more indicted. Efforts had been made to secure the enactment of a more stringent Registry law, and an amended charter by the Legislature. The Committee has devoted their time and talents to effect the reform, without reference or regard to party, in order to secure to the people of Brooklyn a good government in the future. He then called on R. M. WHITING, the Secretary of the Committee, who read the address to the citizens of Brooklyn, which set forth the resolution under which they were appointed, and observed that at the earliest stage of their investigation sufficient frauds committed at the last election were developed to justify the Committee in incurring large expenditures for the purpose of canvassing the city, with the object of ascertaining as nearly as possible the fraudulent vote cast, and in what localities. Some of the persons who committed these frauds had been convicted and punished, and others were yet to be tried. As a means of protection in the future, the Committee have prepared and forwarded to Albany, an Election law, and in reporting to the people of this City, from whom authority was derived, they ask the approval of their acts, and the voice of this meeting in favor of the passage of that law.

The Committee have also felt that they were not departing from the duty assigned to them, in proposing such amendments to the City Charter as shall abolish all special legislation in the interest of individual office-holders and political combinations, and restore to the people, and the officers elected by them, the power which has been absorbed by commissions. In conclusion, it advised every citizen to take an active part in politics as the only means to secure and maintain their freedom.

The report of the Prosecuting Committee to the Citizens' Reform Committee of Brooklyn was then read. The report detailed the duties imposed upon the Committee in the investigation of election frauds, the condition of the public mind at the time, the detection of crime and the prosecution of some of the offenders. Statistics had showed there were cast 6,977 fraudulent votes, and from the evidence, as a whole, the fact that our elections have become a farce is clearly demonstrated. Whatever the voice of the people intended to be expressed by the ballot might be, is frustrated and thwarted by designing, corrupt politicians, who combine, and control the machinery of our primaries; then by organized gangs of repeaters, and through hired inspectors and canvassers, increase or decrease the opposing votes as they desire, and, finally, whichever way the scale might turn, their friends or foes are counted in or out, as they direct.

Hon. W. GOODRICH then read the following report of the Legislative Committee:

To the Citizens' Reform Committee:

The Legislative Committee report that, in pursuance of the instructions which you have from time to time given them, they have caused to be introduced into the Legislature such amendments to the organic laws of the city as in their judgment were designed to further good government and an honest administration of the public finances.

These laws were:

First—An act to authorize the Mayor, Controller and Auditor to appoint two Commissioners in place of the present Water and Sewerage Commissioners, and so limiting the power of the new Board that it should be the agent of the Common Council in carrying out all plans of public improvements, and not itself the mover of such plans. The act was designed to be a temporary measure.

Second—A stringent Election law, which was drawn with particular reference to the peculiar necessities of the city.

Third—An amended charter. A large delegation from your Committee visited Albany and appeared before the Assembly Committee on Cities to whom these acts were referred, for the purpose of securing their passage, but they have not succeeded in securing a report on any one of them.

Meanwhile Senator PERRY, who had also introduced the Election Law into the Senate, has obtained a favorable report, and it will soon be considered in the Committee of the whole Senate.

It is to be feared, however, that this bill will be lost sight of by reason of the introduction of a general Registry bill applicable to the several cities of the State. Your Committe believe that the bill proposed by them should be passed substantially in its present form. Some of the main features, such as the appointment of a Board of Elections, the appointment (by such Board) of the inspectors, who were to be punished by fine for failure to act, and who were not to be connected with the Federal, State or City Government, the description of each registered voter, a forfeiture of the right to vote unless registered, and the publication of the lists, being designed to guard with peculiar stringency the purity of the ballot, so shamefully violated at the recent election.

Your Committee believe that in this act lies the main hope of our people for a fair election and the real reform of our city Government, and they urge unusual effort to secure its passage.

As to the charter, there has been a total misapprehension by the public of its plan, its purport, and scope.

The Committee adopted as the basis of their work the charter of 1854. It was not designed to create a new charter, but to amend the old one, and codify that and the numerous laws which have been passed since its adoption, so as to make the system of city government harmonious, instead of a mass of incongruous, incomplete, and inconsistent statutes. Certain changes in the old system were believed to be rendered necessary on account of the increase of a city which had doubled its population since the passage of that charter.

It must not be forgotten that meanwhile a complete water and sewerage system, and a park of unrivaled beauty, have been, at a large expense, added to the city's improvements, while its progress in public spirit and enterprise have changed the sleepy city of 1854 into the bustling, energetic and advancing city of 1872. These changes in the city to be governed, required changes in the plan of government.

Besides, the gradual withdrawal of the tax-paying element from active participation in political affairs had left the management of the Government in so large a measure to unworthy hands, that, aided by special legislation, a power had grown up and grasped the sources and reins of Government, till corruption had become the rule instead of the exception.

With these views, the Committee recommended, among others, the following changes in the charter:

To concentrate power in the hands of the Mayor and Board of Aldermen; to confide to them the appointment of heads of all Departments not directly elected by the people, and to abolish all irresponsible Commissions.

To abolish, so far as could legally be done, the city Supervisors, and to confer their powers upon the Aldermen.

To reduce the number of officials, and to give the Common Council the power of creating offices and determining salaries.

To subordinate all Departments, so far as possible, to the Common Council, which should order all public work, make all contracts, and direct the disbursement of funds.

To collect all taxes, water rates and assessments, by the same officer, and at the same time.

To forbid the holding of double offices by the same incumbent.

To give the Mayor an absolute veto of all ordinances appropriating money, and to prevent any addition to the bonded debt of the city, except by a vote of the people.

To compel monthly returns of expenditures by all Departments.

To prevent the sale of bonds, except upon public competition.

To secure interest to the city on all deposits of public moneys.

To abolish all fees and emoluments of public officers, except salaries.

To provide for such a civil service reform as should secure a better class of employes in all public offices.

It was hoped that these large grants of power to the Common Council would arouse the public to the importance of securing a better class of representatives in that body.

The charter has been introduced in both Houses, and remains in the hands of their respective committees.

But however important may be the method of administering local government, your Committee, in closing their report, recur to the prominent object which called this Committee into being, and in comparison with which the other matters to which reference has been made seem insignificant indeed. To consign to prison the infamous men who have prostituted the ballot-box, to put their abettors and apologists outside the pale of decent social recognition, to secure such an Election Law as will make their besotted trade and dicker in politics a thing impossible in the future—these are tasks the importance of which can never be fitly expressed in words; for with our people the loss of the elective franchise is the loss of liberty, and when liberty is lost, all is lost. If the men behind the ballot-box can change the verdict of the men before it, our institutions are a signal failure, and republican government a delusion.

(Signed,) WM. W. GOODRICH, S. B. Chittenden, Ray W. Potter, R. M. Whiting, Jr., Arthur W. Benson, A. A. Low, A. Cunningham, Wm. Richardson, James Eschwege, Abm. B. Baylis, Edmund Driggs, Legislative Committee.

Hon. JOHN W. HUNTER, the Treasurer of the Committee, next read the Treasurer's report, duly certified, which showed receipts, principally from contributions by members of the Committee, of $5,600, and expenditures in various ways, necessary for the work in which they were engaged, of $5,583 36, leaving a balance in hand of $16 64. The Treasurer briefly appealed to the meeting to help them onward with their labors by contributing toward the expenses that had not yet been liquidated.

Mr. POTTER then read the following resolutions, which were adopted with but one faint dissenting voice:

Whereas, The enormity of the frauds committed upon the ballot-boxes in this city at our last election was so great as to require the action of our citizens, without regard to party, for our self-protection; and

Whereas, The report of the Committee appointed at the public meeting held in the Academy last November demonstrates beyond cavil or doubt that more than fifteen per cent. of the whole vote cast in this city at the last election was illegal; that gangs of repeaters were permitted to vote at many polls in the very presence of our Police without molestation; that officers of election in many instances refused to swear illegal voters when challenged; that citizens attempting to challenge were beaten or driven from the polls; that poll lists were forged, ballot-boxes stuffed, and, in some instances, that legal votes were changed or destroyed by the inspectors and canvassers, so that the exercise of the right of suffrage has been practically denied among us; and

Whereas, These frauds have demonstrated the existence in our midst of corrupt combinations, which obtained and seek to keep the control of our affairs, by preventing honest elections by ballot-box stuffing and false counting; and

Whereas, The majority of the offenders who were indicted upon the evidence collected by your Committee still remain untried; and

Whereas, A stringent and efficient Registry law is immediately needed; and

Whereas, Such amendments to our city charter are required as will secure the absolute return to our people of the long-lost power to manage our own municipal affairs; therefore,

Resolved, That such offenders against the purity of the ballot as have been indicted and not yet tried should be at once brought to justice.

Resolved, That in local self-government, in the enforcement of a strict Registry law, and in the personal discharge of his political duties by each citizen, are to be found the surest remedy for the evils under which we suffer.

Resolved, That we are opposed to irresponsible Commissions appointed at Albany, and in whose selection our people at large have no voice.

Resolved, That as the defects of our present laws are known and admitted, the people of Brooklyn regard any bill which provides for a charter convention at some future time as only tending to defer prompt legislation, and so to finally defeat our present efforts in behalf of good local government.

Resolved, That we indorse the efforts of our Committee to expose frauds, to punish the offenders, to secure the passage of a thorough and efficient Registry law, and to frame a charter whose provisions shall insure the administration of our municipal affairs under the wise check of direct responsibility to the people.

Resolved, That we call upon our Senators and Assemblymen in the State Legislature to take earnest, immediate and efficient action to secure the passage of the Registry law and the charter submitted by the Committee of Seventy-five.

Resolved, That we hereby pledge ourselves to the cause of reform in this city, and that we will not support any man for public office who is not in favor of the principles above set forth.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to District-Attorney BRITTON and the members of Legislature from the County of Kings.

The reading of the reports and resolutions occupied nearly an hour. SAMUEL MCLANE was the first speaker. He alluded to the outrage which had aroused the citizens of Brooklyn and led to the appointment of the Committee, and then said that for four months they had labored with a diligence that could only be prompted by the knowledge of the responsibility of the position that had been assumed by them. The Committee had perfected measures, which had been presented to the Legislature, free from all partisan bias, and having only the good of the citizens in view, law which he believed had met with general approval. He then recited the advantages to be gained by the laws, among other things the appointment of inspectors and canvassers, who must be qualified voters, residents of the ward in which they were to act, tax-payers, and able to read, write and speak the English language. Four specified days were to be allowed the citizens for the purpose of registering their names, the registry to be closed ten days before election, and the list of those registered to be published five days before election, so that errors and frauds might be easily discovered in time to prevent the polling of fraudulent votes. He then alluded to the fact that out of sixty-nine thousand votes polled at the November election, about eleven thousand were fraudulent, fully sixteen and a half per cent. This showed that one in every six was a fraud and polled by a conspirator. Everywhere were found marks of fraud, as startling as to frighten all honest men and to make their hearts sick with despair for the safety of the ballot-box, which is the corner-stone of their liberties. In these wards, out of 11,700 votes, at least 3,800 were fraudulent, being one fraud to every two honest votes. He asked if the citizens were aware of the danger of this state of affairs. He regretted the lukewarmness of the Legislature, and especially the Brooklyn representatives, in this matter. He referred to the fact that the District-Attorney had indictments in his hands for over two months, and yet the offenders were not tried, and desired the meeting to say that they would hold him responsible, and on his action the citizens would form their opinion of his claims as an honest and efficient officia. He then pointed out in detail the advantages of the proposed amended charter, which had for its basis that of 1854. He said the measure was opposed by those corrupt men who felt the power slipping from their grasp, and by those conspirators who made war on their pockets as well as their liberties. It was for fighting our political gamblers wherever they were found. He urged that the revolution thus begun should be overwhelming, and called upon them to emulate the action of the citizens of New-York; to do their duty and wipe away the stain from the honored name of an American, so that the Government for the people, by the people and from the people should not perish.

Mr. DEMAS BARNES said that had it not been for the exhibits of fraud which had been laid before them in the reports of the Committee, he should not have believed such a state of things possible in the community. For every ballot we deposit we are met by one or two fraudulent ballots, and the fellows who can neutralize our votes in this way have the power to distribute our property. He said that the only remedy for this state of things was to abandon party politics in municipal elections altogether, and to do their best toward getting a stringent Registry law. He called on them to support the charter to the utmost of their power.

Gen. DAVIS referred to the numerous indictments which had been found against men concerned in frauds in the last election, and called on the District-Attorney to do his duty in prosecuting them.

Col. JONES moved that the Committee on Election Frauds continue their labors and bring the guilty parties to punishment. The motion was carried unanimously.

In response to loud calls, Mr. A. A. LOW came forward. He said that it was with something of reluctance he stood before them, for he felt himself scarcely a representative of the Committee of Seventy-five. His usefulness, owing to demands upon his time which could not be eluded, in that Committee had been very limited. The spirit was willing enough, but he felt the want of power, after all that had preceded him, to edify or enlighten them. But as silence might seem to indicate indifference, which would be an unjust and wrong idea, he would presume upon their time to some extent. If what had been said were not sufficient to arouse citizens to a sense of their duty, it would be vain for him to try. He held the exposition of facts which had been laid before them to be more eloquent than mere words and speeches. He wished he could take as hopeful a view of the subject as other speakers had taken. He had the same confidence in an educated people, and thought with Mr. DAVIS that the hearts of the American people were for the right; but this disease is a deep-seated malady; it runs through all the streams of public life, and throws doubt on the perpetuity of institutions so magnificent in theory as to cause us to call our Government the best on the earth. And in theory so it is; alas, that in practice it should often be so different! Our Government is of the people; but it rests on the virtue of the people, and if vice take the place of virtue, our security is gone, and if vicious men were in power, they would place vicious men in place and we should be at their mercy. The speaker could not say whether corruption and fraud were augmenting, whether men were worse now than they had been; yet, if they looked at the returns they would see this evil constantly progressing, and the sacredness of life and security of property violated daily almost without awakening surprise. We have seen a man struck down in the fullness of life, by the most violent means, and the community sympathizing, or at least throwing a shield around the instrument of that, because that man had been all his life an offender against morality. More recently we have seen a more startling proceeding in this community. A large corporation has been wrested from those who had appointed themselves as its governors and directors. And while we do not shrink so much from the mode, though the speaker was of opinion it was clearly in contempt of the law, it was because law had first brought contempt upon itself. [Applause.] And to this goes on, we what will it eventuate? Will the cities of New-York and Brooklyn become the refuge for all the scoundrels of the world, because here through the operation of the suffrage they can elect such Judges as will protect them in their crime! Such must be the result if the ballot-box be not protected. The remedy lay with the people, and not with the Committee of Seventy-five. The speaker bore testimony to the fidelity of the Committee in the performance of the work they had laid out, and referred to the former meeting, when it was formed, and to the unanimous promise then given that the Committee should be supported; yet in looking over the subscription list he saw only forty contributions. He begged those present to remember that the work could not be carried on without that pecuniary help which had been promised. He paid a high tribute to the zeal, fidelity and untiring industry of the Democratic members of the Committee, and warned the public to receive with caution the outside reports about that body. He was no friend to reform who belittled its work. In conclusion the speaker forcibly pointed out that the work of prosecuting the guilty could not go on without pecuniary help, and earnestly called on those present to afford it.

At the close of his speech a list for subscriptions was immediately opened, on which Mr. Low put himself down for $100, and a number of other gentlemen followed.

Gen. WOODFORD then made a brief address, in which he said that the reports of the Committee and the 11,000 known false fraudulent votes did not nearly represent the amount of fraud which had been perpetrated at the last election; that the men who organized these frauds lived in brown-stone houses; their poor tools could be bought for a glass of whisky or $5. They would in time, he trusted, be able to reach the biggest rascals, and in the meantime he too would call on the District-Attorney to do his duty.

A storm of voices called repeatedly for District Attorney BRITTON, and after some moments that gentleman took the stand, and with considerable warmth defended himself from reflections cast on him, and explained why it was that the indicted men had not yet been tried, which was because of the many cases ahead of them. The explanation was received with applause, and the meeting adjourned.
